Weel, thanks again to all those supporters who turned up and created another cecord at the gate and the canteen.

The three teams were battling against injuries.lack of fithess and some inexperience but they are improving all the time and We hope that before too long we will start winning games and show the supporters that we are worth coming to see. Even though the three teams have lost the first three games, all the players are determined to win and, with this outlook we surely will.

A casserole night was held after the game and was well attended which created a great atmosphere in the rooms. The Table 19 19

THE TALE OF THE BOOSTER

By Ken McLeod. (Ken has stated that he did not want his name to go under the following piece which he has sent in...so it's up above!)

Ian Walshe, of Red Hill Road, borrowed a rooster off his neighbor so he could get chickens in the spring. He made the mistake of keeping the rooster separated from the chooks in a laying cage.

When approached about stud fies for the use of the rooster he said that the eggs were not fertile and the rooster was no good.

The rooster turned savage after being locked in the cage for a week, thinking that Ian was making a goose out of him. Now the good(?) neighbor has had to kill the rooster just ocu because the rooster was made a fool of. . blos meed even noitidide edt

ONE WAY MCLEOD ... THE WRONG WAY of course!!!!!!

Our roving correspondent has sent in the following piece about Ken McLeod and we know all the McLeod watchers will be glad to add it to their favorite tales about the Red Hill Scot.

As you all know(well, if you're a truckie you do) when the bush closes down for the wet season, all the truckies take their machines and work on them to repair the wear and tear suffered over the logging season just passed. Every few years a major overhaul has to be done. This is that year for K.McLeod.

First step...buy your parts!Off to Melbourne for this important buying spree.

In fact Ken had three trips. On the first day he was heading home and couldn't help noticing how the other drivers were cursing him as they sped past...all going the other way too! After a while Ken realised that the Maroondah Highway at Croydon has four lanes. two going in each direction. Ken was on the wrong side! Second day saga. . . more parts to be bought. Off to the big smoke...the event of the first day repeated! This time on a service road. Third day...a road in Lilydale which has been changed to a one way street was the scene this time. Ken decided that, as the road had always been available to him before , he would disregard the new, shiny si . sign which read "ONE WAY".

As Ken said about all these incidents..."If anything had happened on any of these occasions it would have been partly the other driver's fault because he surely would have seen me coming in time to get out of the road!!!!"

no comment! .
