Preface

This volume is a sequel to Volume I, 1913 – 1929, published in 2012, and covers the remaining twenty-one years of the diary. For a sketch of Helena's life, as well as for editorial comment on the project, the reader is encouraged to consult Volume I. Here we follow the same conventions.

The two volumes, spanning thirty-seven years, tell one story. The division, which coincides with the end of Helena's first book and the start of a second, was for us essentially a matter of editorial convenience. The present volume draws on the 1929–1940 book and the third book, 1940 – November 1950.

The diary ends abruptly, without explanation, the last entries typical, no sign of winding down. A reflective, retrospective finale? – one may regret the lack yet the end is characteristic: matter of fact, detail, happenings, the focus sharp, the self on hold.

Helena stayed the distance and readers of the diary who do likewise will be rewarded. These thirty-seven years were tumultuous, book-ended by global wars, collapsed empires and emerging superpowers, with Australia both player and victim. On the economic front opportunity was offset by depression and war's distortions. Socially, the Macmillans' class of small-holders was under pressure. Likewise customary religious belief and observance. If Helena's was a pressured life – pressure which took a toll – it was partly because she exposed herself to the life of her times. And if a casualty, also a survivor – a brave upholder of things of value here and now, a faithful witness to things beyond.

As indicated in the Preface, Volume I, the manuscript volumes of the diary are to be lodged with the State Library of Victoria (which also holds the original manuscript material of MacMillan Letters and other Records, 1846-1897, ed David Bollen, 2011).
