

Eaglehawk Identity

Contributed much community work to the Borough.

A U S T R A L I A

From the storms that fired the "Old World's" hate,
Came the sons of a thousand creeds,
United as one in a friendly state,
By the acts of their human needs.
To the North and South and the West they went,
When the land was new and wide,
And their labours conquered a Continent,
With never a star to guide.
In their hearts were harboured their Patron Saints,
The Saints of their Native birth,
But their children arose, to portray in paints,
An image of greater worth.
For they learned to speak in a common tongue,
A tongue we could understand,
And the stories penned, and the songs we sung,
Were the songs of OUR native land.
So let us sing of the day to be,
And sing of Australia's worth,
And the world will hear in this melody,
Of the greatest land on earth.

A. W. Llewellyn.
20th January 1983.

AUSTRALIA DAY EAGLEHAWK.1983. By A.W.Llewellyn.

From the storms that fired the old world's hate,
Came the son's of a thousand breeds,
United as one, in a friendly state,
By the acts of their human needs.

To the North and South, and the West they went,
When the land was new and wide,
And their labors coquered a Continent,
With Never a star to guide.

In their hearts they harboured their patron Saints,
The Saints of their native birth,
But their children arose to portray in paints,
An image of greater worth.

For they learned to speak in a common tongue,
A tongue we could understand,
And the stories penned, and the songs we sung,
Were the songs of our native land.

So let us sing of the days to be,
And sing of Australia's worth,
And the world will hear in this melody,
Of the greatest land on earth.

273
2

AUSTRALIA

From the storms that fired the old world hate,
Came the sons of a thousand creeds,
United as one in a friendly State,
By the acts of their human needs.

To the North and South and the West they went,
When the land was new and wide,
And their labours conquered a continent
With never a star to guide.

In their hearts they harboured their patron saints,
The saints of their native birth,
But their children arose to portray in paints
An image of greater worth.

And they learned to speak in a common tongue,
A tongue we could understand,
And the stories penned and the songs we sung
Were the songs of our native land.

So let us sing of the days to be
And sing of Australia's worth,
And the world will hear in this melody
Of the greatest land on Earth.

To Andrew Mc Donald
from Allan Llewellyn

A. Llewellyn
Waglanark: 1985.

---

AUSTRALIA

From the storms that fired the old world's hate,
Came the sons of a thousand creeds,
United as one in a friendly state,
By the acts of their human deeds.

To the North and South and the West they went,
When the land was new and wide,
And their labours conquered a continent
With never a star to guide.

In their hearts they harboured their patron saints,
The saints of their native birth,
But their children arose to portray in paints
An image of greater worth.

And they learned to speak in a common tongue,
A tongue we could understand,
And the stories penned and the songs we sung
Were the songs of our native land.

So let us sing of the days to be
And sing of Australia's worth,
And the world will hear in their melody
Of the greatest land on earth.

To Andrew Mc Donald
From Allan Llewellyn

A. Llewellyn
Brisbane: 1982.

---