MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

"Mrs. Dane's Defence." one of the strongest of Henry Arthur Jones's plays, is revived in picture form, and will be shown at the Tivoli to-night for the last time. Pauline Frederick, as the lovely but mendacious heroine vampire, triumphs once more. The part of the English society woman who, in striving to live down a youthful indiscretion, is successfully hounded by zealous members of her sex and set, is admirably played by Miss Frederick, who lends to the character a charm and sympathy not common among actresses who have played the part on the stage.

Supporting "Mrs. Dane's Defence" is a splendid picture entitled "The Brand of Cowardice." Lionel Barrymore, brother of the celebrated Ethel, has the chief role. Barrymore acts his part with thorough sincerity, and convinces one that he is a sterling actor. He came to the screen in the early days, playing small parts in the old Biograph Co., with D. W. Griffith. At that time the Biograph Co. was averse to players' publicity, and the various actors worked unknown. Lionel was willing to sacrifice his stage reputation, for he saw the future of the photo-play. Indeed, he was practically the first recognised stage player to enter filmdom.

It hardly seems possible that a simple tale of a country boy who went out west to a rough town where the oil wells are could be made as entertaining as "His Mother's Boy" has been made. Charles Ray is ideal in the title role. His art is carefully concealed, and one feels that he is playing with his heart as well as with his head. Ray acts as Matthew Denton, a boy who has to go to prayer meetings when he wants to swim, and has to read Bunyan when he longs to read "Deadwood Dick." His chance comes when the oil well, from which his mother derives her small fortune, stops paying dividends. Matthew goes west, and after he has been there a month he licks the "bad man" of the town and marries his girl. This film will be shown at the Tivoli Theatre to-morrow night.

Supporting "His Mother's Boy" is a most interesting picture, called "Would You Believe It?" which will not fail to entertain; also a decidedly humorous and refreshing Fatty Arbuckle comedy.

The Lyric offers a thrilling detective story, which will conclude its showing to-night. The picture is called "The Mystery of the Richmond Castle," and provides plenty of excitement. The story deals with a secret society, one member of which, deciding to retire from the society, tenders his resignation. The committee, however, will not accept same until he signs a document stating that should he inherit a fortune he will immediately turn it over to the society. He does become heir to a large fortune, and his efforts to escape forfeiting his inheritance cause his banker's suspicions, and a detective is set to watch him. There are several sensational incidents, and the picture is most entertaining.

"You Can't Believe Everything" is the other picture also finishing its run at the Lyric to-night. This is a breezy summer

Bunyan when he longs to read "Leadwood Dick." His chance comes when the oil well from which his mother derives her small fortune, stops paying dividends. Matthew goes west, and after he has been there a month he licks the "bad man" of the town and marries his girl. This film will be shown at the Tivoli Theatre to-morrow night.
 Supporting "His Mother's Boy" is a most interesting picture, called "Would You Believe It?" which will not fail to entertain; also a decidedly humorous and refreshing Fatty Arbuckle comedy.
 The Lyric offers a thrilling detective story, which will conclude its showing to-night. The picture is called "The Mystery of the Richmond Castle," and provides plenty of excitement. The story deals with a secret society, one member of which, deciding to retire from the society, tenders his resignation. The committee, however, will not accept same until he signs a document stating that should he inherit a fortune he will immediately turn it over to the society. He does become heir to a large fortune, and his efforts to escape forfeiting his inheritance cause his banker's suspicions, and a detective is set to watch him. There are several sensational incidents, and the picture is most entertaining.
 "You Can't Believe Everything" is the other picture also finishing its run at the Lyric to-night. This is a breezy summer
