Dear Patricia:

Many thanks for your nice letter. Things have been very bad in New York, and the magazine has not been produced since last December. Our publisher is trying to revive it, but I am afraid the outlook is not very good. If it is revived, I'll still be editor, but as you can see by this letterhead, I have moved to Boston and I am now Chairman of the institution described in the attached article. I still have a small office in New York which is busy with a theater that we are building in Nashville but apart from that there doesn't seem to be anything significant for me, and I will probably have to close that office at the end of this year.

Penelope Seidler is in New York with her children, and I plan to have a drink with her this afternoon since I have to be in the city in any event. I think she is going back to Sydney directly from New York, and I will ask her to give you a report on what has been going on. Why don't you try to wangle an invitation for me next year to come back to Australia? I'll do almost anything in return.

As ever,

Peter Blake, FAIA
Chairman
