Three cheers for our volunteers!

Since its inception in 1974, the Kew Festival has become a community focal point.

The festival provides the opportunity for the people of Kew to come together and celebrate the many fine features of our city. It adds to our sense of identity.

The flurry of activity which accompanies the festival is only the tip of the iceberg. The smooth running of this event is the result of a year's hard work by the volunteers on the Festival Committee.

No sooner is one festival over than they meet to assess its strengths and weaknesses and start planning for the next one. This process not only takes considerable time but also a strong sense of commitment to the concept of community.

Kew Festival is a community event in every sense of the word. It is non-profit making; keeping the costs of rides and refreshments down is a priority. While Council provides funds for overheads the success of the festival is due to the efforts of our volunteer force.

The portico entertainment, the manning of stalls in the Alexandra Gardens, and the spit roast which are all part of Fun Day, are provided by volunteers.

We are very fortunate that we have so many people in Kew who are prepared to give their time and energy to the community. I'd like to thank all these volunteers, not only those involved in the festival, but also those who help keep such valuable services as Meals on Wheels and the Community Bus in operation.

So often our volunteers are taken for granted and their efforts unsung, but they make a very important contribution to the smooth running of the community.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank these workers for their contribution to our community life and to congratulate the Kew Festival Committee on the wonderful program they have in store for us.

Be a part of the Kew community and support your festival.

Cr Joe Orlando
Mayor

Children's services update

The CSCC has worked to raise the quality of Kew children's lives during 1986.

The committee works closely with all groups in our community concerned with children's education and welfare and is made up of a cross-section of the community, from parents to professional caregivers.

It is the link between community and Council in all aspects of children's services and acts as an overall referral group for Kew families.

If you would like to learn more about the committee, become part of it or vote for representatives, come to the AGM (see Dates for details).

Our guest speaker, Mr Rod MacDonald will speak on the joys and frustrations of parenting and will welcome your questions too.

See you there!

Krista Bell

Holiday integration huge success

Eight children with disabilities participated in Council's school holiday program and the experience proved very positive for all involved.

There was no shortage of "chauffeurs" for children in wheelchairs and able bodied children were very willing to assist those with disabilities.

Karen Clarke, integration aide with the program, was delighted with the results.

"You could see the confidence of the children with disabilities growing during the program as they realised how many activities they could participate in," she said.

She added that staff found the challenge of integration very rewarding and that there was a heightened awareness of the needs of all children.

Profile

Cr Robin Saunders

Good communication between Council and the local community, and within Council itself is one of Robin Saunders' chief concerns.

He has been a councillor for four and a half years and served as mayor in 1984/85 so he has had the opportunity to observe Council-community interaction very closely.

His experience has confirmed his view that local government is very important, dealing as it does with an extremely wide range of issues and because there are numbers of groups in the community who look to Council for support and a sense of identity.

In assessing his mayoralty he said that the experience had also reinforced his belief that harmony and team work were essential to strong local government. "Unless people pull in the same direction, not much will be achieved," he said.

Yet he values the diversity of opinion which typifies Council and committee meetings. Councillors must balance general community well-being against specific needs within the constraints of limited funds.

Cr Saunders has noticed changes during his time as councillor.

"With increasing responsibility devolving to the municipality from other levels, issues have become more complex and necessitate informed debate.

"It is sometimes difficult to ensure that adequate information is available and understood," he said.

Cr Saunders speculated about how long the system of unpaid councillors could continue effectively, given the growing demands on their time and expertise.

He has also noticed an increasing turnover among councillors, which he regards as a good trend.

"We need new people and fresh ideas," he said.

Councillor Saunders considers two terms ideal for a councillor and he would like to see a regulation prohibiting more than three terms.

For Robin Saunders, being a councillor has been a very broadening experience.

"It is an educative process, one requiring much patience but extremely worthwhile in the long run," he commented.

He considers being a councillor to be an opportunity to put something back into the community.

In retrospect, Cr Saunders is particularly pleased with his involvement in developing a streetscape policy for Kew, emphasising the planting of large European trees which he feels are crucial if Kew's special atmosphere is to be maintained.

He has also been active in traffic management, Recreation Centre planning, the new Depot, Kew Junction Planning, Billabong conservation and the Yarra Bend Park Trust.

His professional skills as a civil engineer and planner have proved to be an asset when dealing with many of these areas.

For Cr Saunders, the key aims for 1987 will be to commence the Recreation Centre, to balance the competing needs of conservation and recreation in the development of Willsmere Park, to continue the implementation of Council's plans for Kew Shopping Centre which will provide pedestrian malls and a better range of shops and to ensure that traffic management studies are undertaken in Studley Park Ward.

He is a firm believer in the value of community consultation in the decision making process.

Cr Saunders is confident that satisfactory outcomes can be achieved in these areas because he considers that Kew is served by a strong team of councillors and council officers.

Robin Saunders is clearly a community minded person, as is his wife Kate. She has been very active in the local kindergarten and is president of the Kew Primary School Council.

The Saunders have three daughters: Anne, who is 8, Emily who is 6, and 5-year-old Sarah.

Keeping you informed

Tenancy

The relationship between Landlord and Tenant has always been one with a potential for friction. Both have clearly defined privileges and responsibilities and if differences arise it is better that they be resolved without recourse to litigation.

Details of legislation covering most aspects of tenancy are available at the Citizens' Advice Bureau and, if you need legal advice, a solicitor can be consulted without charge. The Bureau is open for enquiries on all matters from 10am to 3pm daily from Monday to Friday, and the free legal service is available each Tuesday evening between 7.30 and 9pm. No appointment is needed and telephone enquiries can be made by calling 861-5244. The Bureau is located at the rear of the City Hall directly opposite the Library.

Inner East Home Board Scheme

The Inner East Home Board Scheme aims to expand the range of community-based options available by facilitating private board arrangements between adults with an intellectual disability and provider households.

A variety of households may be suitable to provide board. For example, sole parents, individuals sharing, single people, couples or families.

Boarders will pay for the rent of their room as well as for any services provided, like meals, laundry and cleaning. In addition, board providers will receive a subsidy of $40 per week, from the Office of Intellectual Disability Services in return for support offered to boarders.

The scheme will best suit boarders who only require minimal support from the household providing the board.

Board providers do not require any previous experience in this sort of scheme, as they receive orientation prior to taking in a boarder. However, they must be enthusiastic about offering less structured, home-based accommodation to a person with an intellectual disability.

The Scheme's co-ordinator assists interested boarders and board providers to work out details concerning the type of boarding arrangement they prefer, and will also have contact with, and provide support to the boarder and the household once a boarding arrangement has commenced.

The benefits of the Scheme are mutual. Households providing board gain additional income and the satisfaction of providing a valuable service, and boarders gain the opportunity for greater independence, to learn new skills and experience greater integration with their community.

Anyone interested in becoming part of the Scheme as boarders or board providers can contact the Co-ordinator, Linda Morgan, on 898 9411.
