Amphitheatre, Nov. 27, 1886.
Mr. C. Chapman.—Sir,—I have suffered from Neuralgia for the last ten years, finding no relief from anything. I tried medical advice, but it was of no use to me. I have used your Australian Foliage Balsam since, finding instant relief as soon as I apply it, and I do not now suffer any pain. I am thankful there is such a preparation for so terrible a complaint. You are at liberty to make what use you like of this testimonial. I remain, yours respectfully,
Mrs. SARAH J. MILLA.

Bungaree, January 20, 1887.
Mr. C. Chapman.—Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the value of your Australian Foliage Balsam, it being most valuable in cases of Rheumatism, from which I suffered very acutely for many months. It and liniments internally curing me when all other medicines had no effect. You are at liberty to make use of this if you think proper.—Yours faithfully,
ROBERT HORSNEY.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle miasms are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See article in the "Civil Service Gazette."

Farmer. HORSE-BREEDING IN FRANCE.

The Haras System.

In the first report of the Commission on the Breeding of Horses, the Commissioners refer to the desirability of establishing Haras throughout the kingdom.

Since the establishment of the St. Lo Haras, a large addition has been made to the number of stallions provided for the district, and the original buildings being erected, so that there are actually two Depots at St. Lo, but both under the management of the same director.

At the two Depots there are in all 250 stallions, of which 20 are thoroughbreds, and the remainder are roughly called "half-bred," being the produce of anything except thoroughbred stock.

afterwards when they come to sell or exhibit the produce.

By the State, and still a third class "authorised" by the State; either may be used by the elevators and in each case a corresponding certificate is granted by the owner, and "vis-à-vis" by the director of the Depot of the district.

PRODUCE OF PURE-BRED V HALF-BRED. To a breeder brought up to believe in the use of nothing but pure-bred sires, the heterogeneous lots of horses at St. Lo may have many objections, and perhaps it is difficult to apprise them at their true worth.

Traveller. The Sewers of Paris.

The idea of a pleasure excursion through a sewer must seem to a denizen of any of our large cities, who has never visited Paris, a most singular event.

We started, says a visitor, from the Palace Chatelet at three o'clock, and descended a little winding staircase, the steps and walls of which were covered with a green cloth fringed by red border.

It is so hard to be a widow in India that some of the missionaries there are disposed to think that the custom of burning their widows was an act of mercy.

You hold her fast. You kiss her. "My little girl," you say; and, indeed, she is your little girl.

Never is a girl so much mother's own as at fifteen. It depends a good deal on the child's temperament and her looks, as to how much she loves her mother.

The Austrian government have, it is stated, introduced into the Reichsrath a strong measure for the prevention of drunkenness.

Humor. Waited a Thumper.

It is so hard to be a widow in India that some of the missionaries there are disposed to think that the custom of burning their widows was an act of mercy.

You hold her fast. You kiss her. "My little girl," you say; and, indeed, she is your little girl.

Never is a girl so much mother's own as at fifteen. It depends a good deal on the child's temperament and her looks, as to how much she loves her mother.

The Austrian government have, it is stated, introduced into the Reichsrath a strong measure for the prevention of drunkenness.

Humor. No Flies on that Girl.

A Sydney girl recently received a letter written on a typewriter, and wrote "I really admit that your attention is not directed to me, but no man can be so stupid as to write your own hand-writing and I will at once give your letter due attention."

Summary of European News.

Telegrams conveying the subjoined information have been received during the week by the Melbourne dailies. The latest news from Sikkim state that a force of 8000 Tibetians is massed in the Jalap Pass. The British troops will continue to hold Gnatong until the difficulty is settled.

In Tallanore goul in November last, the verdict being that Mr. Mandeville's death was due to the brutal and unjustifiable treatment he received during his imprisonment. Mr. Anderson strongly condemned the harshness shown towards prisoners confined in Ireland for offences under the Criminal Act, and after stating that the doctor at the prison had preferred to commit suicide rather than attend as a witness at the inquest of Mr. Mandeville, enquired whether the Government intended to suspend the other officials at the goal, to mark their disapproval of the cruelties alleged to have been practised.

Melbourne Gossip.

Two subjects—and two only—have overshadowed Melbourne during the past week, and they are the Budget and the Exhibition. The Premier's announcement of his million surplus, and the fact of the opening day of the Exhibition being at hand, have quite monopolised public attention. As I heard a member express it is in the lobby of the House a few evenings' back, "You see the two are evenly related. Mr. Gillies, you know, made a kind of exhibition of his Budget, whilst as to the opening day of the Exhibition, you see, refused to budget it"—referring of course to the anticipated postponement. A very weak joke, and unworthy the reputation for wit of the member for East Melbourne. However, it is true enough, Melbourne has been talking of nothing else but these two things the week.

COMMERCIAL.

ARARAT PRODUCE MARKET. A fair amount of business has been transacted in the produce market during the past week of this season of the year, when produce sales are at their quietest. Two small sales of wheat have been made at 2s 10 1/2 per bushel. At Horsham sales of wheat are being made at 2s 7 1/2 per bushel—a slight advance on the previous week. The nominal quotation at Donald is 2s 7 1/2 and at St. Arnaud 2s 8 1/2. In this district bran and pollard have been slack. Oats again show a slight improvement, and the tone of the market is firm. A lot of 50 bags was sold at 2s 4d during the week, and at the close 2s 4d was realised for a clean lot of 50 bags. Two or three loads of potatoes came in from Warrnambool on Friday and Saturday and were cleared out at 2s 5 1/2 per ton; Ballarat varieties having in lines at 2s 1 1/2 to 2s 1 1/2 per bushel, and in sacks at 2s 1 1/2 to 2s 1 1/2 per bushel, bags in Oats, 2s 4d to 2s 4 1/2 per bushel, bagging Pollard, 8d per bushel. Corn, 8d per bushel. Wheat, 2s 7 1/2 per bushel. Peas, 2s 3d per bushel. Beans, 4s 6d per bushel. Clover hay, 2s 6d per ton. Potatoes, Warrnambool, 2s 3 1/2 per ton. Potatoes, Ballarat, 2s 1 1/2 per ton. Hay, shaves, 2s 2 1/2 per ton. Hay, shaves, 2s 2 1/2 per ton. Straw, 2s 2 1/2 per ton. Chaff, 1s 9d per cwt. Oatmeal, 1s 9d per cwt. Butter, fresh, 1s 4d per pound. Butter, salted, 9d per pound. Bacon, 9d per pound. Cheese, 5d per pound. Eggs, 1s per dozen.—Advertiser.

ELECTION OF COUNCILLOR FOR THE NORTH RIDING.

Sir,—As the election is so close at hand, you should really give us your advice on the matter of choosing a candidate, for we live in the bush and are indifferently posted up in the qualifications of the candidates. We have heard it mentioned that Mr. Topper would make a good councillor, he being a great conservator of commons, and if he were returned for the council, he might become a manager of the commons, and the commonsers would feel at ease that their rights would not be infringed upon. We have doubts on the subject and would be glad of any information. Is this the same Mr. Topper who with another applied some time ago for the severance of the common.

"Diseased Nature often times breaks forth in strange eruptions."—Act III. Scene I.

TO THE PUBLIC. SOME patients suffering from nervous afflictions are afraid, from sheer helplessness and modesty to PERSONALLY consult a medical man; other patients have not the self-possession and coolness, when in the consulting room, to accurately describe their symptoms, their habits of life, and the nature of the disease they suffer from.

Let such a person (he or she) sit quietly down in the privacy of their own apartments, and with calm minds describe each symptom of their case. A clear statement thus written, and laid before me, is preferable to nervous dictation, or personal consultation. Where, however, a disinterested and exceptional character, a personal consultation may become necessary; but my success in every case is a proof that the thousands upon thousands whom I have treated during the last thirty-two years, not a single mistake has ever occurred, not a case has ever been made public—in fact, the very simplicity of my system of correspondence prevents publicity.

At the same time medicines are sent to my patients in such a form as to defy detection. How many thousands have I not brought up old? How many have been enabled to enter into the marriage state through consulting me? How many after marriage have privately consulted me, and been blessed, and their married lives made fruitful and happy? How many wasted ruined youths of both sexes have also been restored to health, and thanked me in manifold ways for having consulted me by letter?

How many questions arise where the family physician is unable to unravel the case, and where the patient himself, not daring to tell his family medical adviser the nature of his complaint, unfeelingly wastes, or, worse than that, murders himself by the use of the crude curable stage, and is left a hopeless wreck?

A letter, written in the privacy of the room, and dropped in the post box, reaches me quietly. The answer is returned as quietly and unostentatiously, and the patient, without stepping from his chamber, except to post his letter, is by return of post put in full possession of the nature of his case. His hopes are raised; his doubts removed; and he is comparatively a new man—in fact, in many cases, a new being altogether.

The only addition to the ordinary written letter, is the age, occupation, habits, and symptoms—nothing more. The usual consultation fee of £1 (one pound) must be enclosed, otherwise no answer will be returned. There are thousands of cases in daily life where a consultation with one at a distance will remove, by a single letter, a great fear, a great care, and it often solves what appears as an impenetrable mystery. Many a sad heart has been made joyful on receipt of an explanatory letter from me.

To those who are about to marry, I would say, consult me before doing so, and prevent many a future trouble, and remove many a matrimonial fear and prejudice; to those more especially who have suffered in early years from disease, or who have since their marriage, or who have delays or dangerous, and, as an expert, my time may not be always at your service. You can, by simply enclosing one pound, have the benefit of my experience in the same manner. If I lived in your own town, and with the additional advantage of thorough privacy—Yours truly, LOUIS L. SMITH.

Address—DR. L. L. SMITH, 182 COLLINS STREET EAST, MELBOURNE. Consultation Fee by Letter £1. Fee for personal Consultation, £1 1s. The latter is inclusive of Medicine. Medicines forwarded, well-packed, to all the Colonies, India, and Europe. The only legally qualified practitioner advertising and registered under the Medical Board of Victoria, and practicing the last 35 years. 128 COLLINS STREET EAST, MELBOURNE.

DR. T. C. WRIGHT

M.B., Ch. M., etc.

The expert specialist on Kidney, Nervous, and Special Complaints, registered by the Medical Boards of Victoria and England (and the only legally qualified practitioner advertising in Australia who holds the diploma of Physician and Surgeon), has established the Victorian Progressive Medical Institute, 53 Flinders-street West, Melbourne, for the scientific and effectual cure of all phases of Nervous and Debility, Exhausted Vitality, Premature Decay, Genito-Urinary Disorders, Female Complaints, Skin and Blood Diseases, and Chronic and complicated affections.

Dr. Wright cures Fits, Spinal Complaints, Nervous Head, and Mind Affections, Impediments to Marriage, Effects of Indiscretions, Eruptions, Excesses, Scrofulous Humours, Striptions, Spermatorrhoea, Premature Decay, Incapacity for Study or Business, Rheumatic Complaints, Liver, Heart, Lung, and Kidney Affections, and all morbid conditions of the system, no matter from what cause arising.

It matters not what your troubles may be, call or write to Dr. Wright, and get his honest opinion of your complaints. If it is curable, he will tell you so; if not, he will tell you also, for he will not undertake a case unless he is confident of effecting a cure. It will cost you nothing for consultation, so satisfy yourselves that the Dr. understands your case.

CONFIDENCE ABSOLUTE.
Sufferers can be treated equally well at a distance.

N.B.—I wish it distinctly understood that I do not claim to perform impossibilities, or to have miraculous power. I claim only to be a skilled and successful Physician thoroughly informed in my specialty.

Amphitheatre, Nov. 27, 1884.

Mr. C. Chapman.—Sis,—I have suffered from Neuralgia for the last ten years, finding no relief from anything. I tried medical advice, but it was of no use to me. I have used your Australian Foliage Balsam since finding instant relief as soon as I apply it, and I do not now suffer any pain. I am thankful there is such a preparation for so terrible a complaint. You are at liberty to make what use you like of this testimonial. I remain, yours respectfully,
Mrs. SARAH J. MILLS.

Bunong, January 20, 1887.

Mr. C. Chapman.—Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the value of your Australian Foliage Balsam, it being most valuable in cases of Rheumatism, from which I suffered very acutely for many months, and that it has internally cured me when all other medicines had no effect. You are at liberty to make use of this if you think proper.—Yours faithfully,
ROBERT HORNSBY.

His Only Friend.

He crouched upon the pauper mound
Where his loved master's bones were laid;
In dumb despair he gazed around—
One shaggy paw half fearful laid
Upon the earth, so cold, so gray,
From his one friend, his master, lay.
He whined and howled, his grief to tell;
His face was piteous to behold;
And lo! the rain in torrents fell,
Chilling long and long the thunder rolled.
He did not mind the angry storm,
That beat upon his trembling form.
Who slept below? A worthless scamp.
An idle ostler, people said.
A wall—a stray—a ragged tramp,
Who gladly shared his crust of bread
With the fond brute, his only friend,
Who lived to guard him, and defend.
They had been comrades in distress;
Misfortune marked them both its own;
And, now he missed that rude carter,
How cold, how dark, the world had grown.
He dropped his head, his eyes grew dim;
His soul no ray of hope for him.
He sought one pitying glance in vain,
For dainty ladies shrank away,
Held back their skirts in cold disdain;
Lough urchins kicked him as he lay.
They heeded not his grief, for he
Was but a cur of low degree!

"GLADYS."

A ROMANCE OF THE SPRING TIME.

BY M. M. B.

A lovely morning in spring, when you seem to see the trees growing and the flowers opening to the sun—all nature is so bright around you that you feel a reflection of its warmth in your heart, and a song of thanksgiving rises to your lips for the fact of life, and the blessing of good health to enjoy it.

A garden lies before us, sloping gradually to the river, and filled with all the sweetest perfumes of bud and blossom—an old-fashioned garden—where the Lent lilies and their graceful heads, and the tall narcissi shared the honors with the monthly roses.

A pretty house of the cottage type, though built with plenty of space at command, and showing outhouses and stabling in its rear, bespeaks the inhabitants to be sufficiently blessed with this world's goods to live in comfort, at any rate, if not in absolute luxury.

Seated under a spreading sycamore, with some dainty embroidery in her hand, was a girl of surpassing grace and beauty; one glance at the pure oval of her face, at the deep gray of her eyes, and the golden brown of her hair, "sunning over with curls," to say nothing of her supple figure and taper neck, and you would not feel surprised to find what was the first fact that Beatrice, daughter of the landowner, had just discovered of the last three seasons.

There was, however, a tinge of melancholy in the wistful drowsiness of her eyes, which suggested the fact, that though a heiress, as well as a beauty, she was not entirely happy or free from care.

Flitting about from shrub to bush, and from blossom to berry, as fancy alone dictated, and gradually filling the basket she carried in her hand with all the spots of the garden, was another girl.

The two were much alike, but this one was younger, brighter, fairer, and evidently happier than her cousin, for such was the degree of relationship between the two.

Beatrice, the older cousin, was the owner of the pretty cottage, where also dwelt her aunt and cousin Gladys. An almost sisterly affection existed between the two girls.

Up to the present moment, Gladys had been the chief spokeswoman, but the conversation had been somewhat desultory and interrupted, owing to the fact that in one place, and gathering flowers afforded an splendid exercise for perpetual motion. Now, however, she came and settled herself on the grass in her cousin's feet, and with a little sign of content began to arrange her spoils.

Beatrice continued the conversation as if no interruption had taken place.

"It is all very fine for you to talk, Gladys, just because you happen to be engaged to the best fellow in the world—the best 'catch' of the season—a handsome man, and one who, beside all those advantages, is as madly in love with you, little cousin, as if these were the days of chivalry, and you were an enchanted princess in a moated castle. He has only one serious fault that I know of, and there's no denying that he is frightfully, unreasonably jealous."

"It's the only thing that prevents our love story being as common-places as a cook's or a housemaid's," pouted Gladys, "but I am always hoping that something may turn up to arouse his jealousy, but you know," confidentially, and with a quaint little sigh, "I'm dreadfully in love with him, that I don't think I ever can get over him. I'm sure I could never give him even the slightest cause—"

"Oh, jealous people don't wait for cause," interrupted her cousin; "but I trust you will never find this out, Gladys."

"I don't mean to deny that I'm a very lucky girl," continued Gladys, as if she had not heard, or, at any rate, headed off an interruption, and holding up a bunch of creamy roses to see how they harmonized with her cousin's dress, and fastening them in her brooch in a kind of parenthesis, "for that Claude is not the best and dearest fellow in the world, beside being, I know, quite too good for me; but I am sure, Trix," coaxingly looking up into the elder girl's face to try to get her to agree, "it would have been much wiser and much more romantic if he had happened to be an artist, and worn a velvetre coat, and—"

"Yes," laughingly, "yes, my dear coz, much more romantic, but not one-half so convenient. It was because my lover, Denzil de Lisle, was poor, that Aunt Catherine forced me to reject him. Don't ever think, Gladys my dear," speaking very tenderly, "that the most romantic surroundings can ever reconcile you to saying 'good-bye' to one whom you truly love. I shall never forget Denzil, and if only I could see him once again, I could die happily."

"Nonsense, love," said Gladys, putting her arms round her cousin, and kissing her affectionately, "don't talk about dying in this glorious weather! Let's think of something happy and bright, like the sunshine, gathering all the flowers into a big bunch. Claude said he'd be down about twelve, and take us both up to the river fishing. Yes, Trix, as you say, I'm a lucky girl, and, after hearing your sad romance, I don't think I shall ever want one of my own; but, still, you must allow that poverty—mind, poverty without rags, I distinctly object to rags—poverty is so much more romantic than having all the luxuries of life and four ever."

"My dear Gladys, I trust you will always have them; you were made for the sunshine. I can't imagine you with a great sorrow, or even a great love, although doubtless you'll go through life quite respectably without either."

"That was said in a joking manner, but when Beatrice said that, she was giving to me and the brown eyes full with tears, she drew her cousin tenderly to her side, and finished in quite a serious manner.

"Gladys, darling, whenever I look at your bright face and think of your happiness, I always feel so thankful you are glad in the first man you ever cared for, who is in every way worthy of your love, you must mind me, dear. You will understand now why I am sometimes sad and melancholy. I am going into the house; shall I bring your hat, dear?"

"Yes, or a sunshade, or something to keep me from being burnt black as a crow."

"That wouldn't be at all romantic, would it, Gladys?"

"No," with a merry laugh, "not at all; and I don't think Claude would like a blackamoor for a wife, dear Trix," watching the graceful figure till she disappeared into the cottage.

"Well, I don't wonder at men falling in love with Beatrice. I should myself; it's quite a delight to me to watch her face, and I'm not a man, or I suppose it would be more so. I'm quite proud to be her cousin, and for people to pretend that they see a family likeness between us is certainly very amusing. I would do anything for my world for her—only I'm awfully glad Claude didn't like her best, because I don't think I could give him up to Beatrice. But," with a puzzled look, "if he had liked her best, I don't suppose I should have had anything to do with it. Well," with a shake of the head, "I don't know anything about that all I care to know. Now, if he had been here, I could have proved my devotion by—"

But the rest of her meditations were cut short by a hand being laid over her eyes. With a little shriek of pretended dismay, Gladys jumped up, scattering her flowers, to right and left. Her face looked very red, as she hastily released herself and stooped to pluck the blossoms, exclaiming in tragic tones—

"Oh, Claude, how you frightened me!"

"Frightened you, sweetheart? Why, what a clumsy brute I must be. But there, never mind those flowers, Ladybird, I'll take good care nobody else frightens you while I am here."

He took her in his arms and bestowed a kiss on her forehead, and she, with a figure of six feet one or two, clad in the lightest of tweed suits. His big blonde beard and thick hair shone like threads of gold in the sunshine. His blue eyes rested with deep admiration on the dainty figure he held in his arms.

After a few minutes given to lover-like demonstration, he seated himself on the grass beneath the shady tree, and drew Gladys down by his side, possessing himself of one small hand.

"And now tell me what you were talking about when I came."

Gladys blushed, and a sudden fiery red as she recollected the wish that was on her lips.

"Talking! Was I talking? What did I say?"

"Well, I only heard part of a sentence, it was this: 'I could have proven my devotion by—'"

"Oh," with a nervous little laugh, "I suppose you were rehearsing a speech for our private theatricals, indeed! Now look here, Gladys, in a very masterful tone, "I won't have you talking about your devotion to any other fellow but me. How do I know if you talk about it but how you may feel it, and then," lugubriously, "what is to become of me? No, no, sweetheart, talk as much about devotion to me as you please, I am open to as many confidences on that subject as you like to make, so fire away, I'm ready."

"Nonsense, Claude," said Gladys, laughing in spite of herself, "as if one could make love to order, like a dress, or a coat, or boots."

"Well, nonsense or not, private theatricals are for the very mischief, and put nonsense into girls' heads. I hate all such exhibitions!"

"But, Claude, you know its for a charity, and you know—"

"Charity be hanged! Charity, should begin at home, and I believe its vanity makes all the difference between a good and a bad charity. You'd think it precious hard lines if you'd got to do it for a living."

"Now don't be disagreeable, you know Beatrice has promised, and you know all the places are booked at double prices to see the lovely Miss Cameron, the beauty of the last three seasons, in all the latest confessions that Worth has promised to send for the occasion—"

"All well and good, if Beatrice likes to do it, and her aunt, your mother I mean, sees no objection; but recollect you are my property now," looking at her with proud possession written on every feature of his handsome, manly face. "And I won't have other fellows staring at you, and talking about you—discussing you as if you were a piece of statuary, or the last new picture. Now don't look so disappointed, darling; I can't bear to see that dew on my nose, sure, Trix," coaxingly looking up into the elder girl's face to try to get her to agree, "it would have been much wiser and much more romantic if he had happened to be an artist, and worn a velvetre coat, and—"

"Yes," laughingly, "yes, my dear coz, much more romantic, but not one-half so convenient. It was because my lover, Denzil de Lisle, was poor, that Aunt Catherine forced me to reject him. Don't ever think, Gladys my dear," speaking to us, to the old house in Cornwall, where we had lived all our lives, and continued to do so till two years ago, when old Squire Cameron died, and left his goddaughter, Gladys Conway—your Gladys, you know—ten thousand a year, and his estate in Ayrshire, the only provision being that Gladys should take the name of his mother—Beatrice—and add thereto his own patronymic of Conway; so that is the whole long story told in a few words. I will leave Trix to fill in the details; but now—aren't you not going to see her? Confess now," added the heart-broken girl.

"Yes, indeed I am; and can I see her now—at once?"

"Yes, you shall be kept waiting long, I will be at once and find Beatrice and send her to you. Will you come into the house, or see Beatrice here?"

"Here, if she will come."

"I am sure she will; so, once more, all desperation, and with a happy laugh, the girl disappeared.

A more serious look flitted across the somewhat sombre face of Major de Lisle, and then a look of hope came into the brown eyes, the thoughts in his brain were too many to remain there unuttered, and came forth in dreamy mutterings.

"His musings were broken by a voice speaking just behind him—the one voice in all the world to him.

"Gladys told me—Oh, Denzil! at last."

The latter portion of the sentence was spoken in his arms, with her head, as he so often dreamed of it, on his breast. One passion, which, when the love and longing of years seemed to find expression, and she lay quite still, with the tears coursing down her face. In vain he tried to kiss them away; but she said to let her weep, it did her good.

The paroxysm of weeping soon spent itself, and Beatrice smiled up into her lover's face.

"Now tell me," she said, raising her head a little from his resting-place, and clasping one of his brown hands in her two little white ones. "Now tell me, Denzil, how did you find me? When did you come? Why didn't you come before, and yet, I dread to think of it, I should be mistaken again. Ah, my darling, I did not know how entirely I loved you till the thought of seeing you again has so unnerved me; but I must not meet her with a gloomy face. Ah, here she comes!"

And the strong man actually trembled with suppressed excitement, but the high footsteps he had heard of my Gladys, who felt slightly disconcerted to find a stranger there, and no sign of Claude whatever. She advanced, however, in her pretty fluttering way, and held out a tiny hand, which Major de Lisle took and cordially pressed, for although this was not the rose, doubtless she had been here.

"Major de Lisle, I presume," said Gladys, in her bright young voice, and as she spoke, she could not help thinking what a goodly man this lover of her cousin's was.

He was tall and slight with a well-proportioned and well-built torso, which looked remarkably enduring. The face was that of a man who had thought and suffered; clear olive skin, and waving dark brown hair, and heavy, drooping moustache, kindly, deep brown eyes, that women, little children and animals always trusted at first sight. A clear mellow voice replied to the salutation, and a smiling light came into his dark eyes.

"Yes, that is my name I came here by Claude Meredith's invitation, and now as he has been unexpectedly recalled to town, I must introduce myself. He left this note for Miss Conway—"

Gladys looked as he felt, truly astonished, but held out her hand the least case it a feeble and tried to quiet his impatience with the soothing influence of a picked Havana. The following sentences broke from him between the puffs of his cigar—

"I never saw Gladys so odd before. Now, if I were a jealous kind of fellow—I repeat, if I were jealous, 'this last was very emphatic, accompanied by kicking a small pebble into the river. 'I should swear this was some old lover of hers, but it can't be. I'll never believe my Gladys, my little white dove, could so deceive me."

Here he took a quick walk along the miniature terrace which overhung the river.

"No, I don't believe it, and yet, how alas account for her sudden agitation at the mention of Denzil's name? It was that which so affected her, I'll swear—ah, here comes the fellow himself; I'll tackle him," going to meet him. "He's a duced good-looking, quite one's own idea of an officer and a gentleman. Ah, my dear fellow," as the two men met and cordially shook hands. "You've found us out. The girls will be very glad to see you. What a jolly day for a row, isn't it?"

"Yes, grand; but I'm afraid the fish won't bite; the sun's too bright."

"Oh, the fish are only an excuse. There's one of the prettiest girls in the world to spoon. Oh, you needn't shake your head and try to look solemn; wait till you've seen her. I'm sure Mrs. Conway—"

"Conway!" interrupted the other man quickly. "Did you say Conway?"

"Claude's face grew somewhat shadowed, as he answered—

"Yes, do you know her?"

"I know Mrs. Conway once—a very pretty girl. Has she a daughter?"

"Oh, yes," eagerly. "Gladys is—"

"That name—it must be the same."

He turned to Claude and holding out his hand, said, "Do you know I have searched everywhere for that girl for the last two years, but have been unable to hear of her? Lady Catherine Lennox is her aunt."

"She was—didn't you know that she is dead? But, tell me, old fellow, what do you know of Gladys? Where did you see her?"

"She is the only woman I ever loved," rejoined the other. "I love her still, though Heaven knows she treated me scandalously. We were everywhere together for a month. I followed her like her own shadow; she smiled but on me, though then I was poor and she scorned others, men who were rich and titled—"

"Gladys, are you sure it was Gladys Conway?"

"Sure. Do I know my own face in the glass? Not better than I know hers. Why, man, though I have not seen her for so long, but a pencil in my hand, and I draw her face, feature for feature, and line for line, as fair as it was. Of course Aunt Kate was a furious false. She fooled me to the top of my bent, and I was mad enough to think she loved me, when in the spring sunshine she pressed her lips to mine and told me that nothing but death should part us; and that that very evening to write the cruel words she did, saying she was already pledged to Hugo Baskiss, that I must forget her; we had been very foolish, but it was essential that she should make a wealthy marriage. I cursed her in my heart, and left London that night, England the next week, and only returned from India the day before I met you in Bond Street. I had just learned that Beatrice was still unmarried, and made up my mind that I would search for Gladys and hear the explanation of the seeming mystery from her lips alone; and now you tell me that she is here, and still unmarried. Oh, I shall go mad with joy, at the thought of seeing her so soon, with the hope that yet she may be mine. Ah, I don't know what I'm saying, but I'm so cruel, so false. I always knew there must have been some strange mistake, some—"

"Yes, as you say, there had been some mistake, but you must excuse me—so sorry—just recollect a most important engagement came back from India last week, and yes, I read to think of it, I should be mistaken again. Ah, my darling, I did not know how entirely I loved you till the thought of seeing you again has so unnerved me; but I must not meet her with a gloomy face. Ah, here she comes!"

When did you come? Why didn't you come before, and yet, I dread to think of it, I should be mistaken again. Ah, my darling, I did not know how entirely I loved you till the thought of seeing you again has so unnerved me; but I must not meet her with a gloomy face. Ah, here she comes!"

And the strong man actually trembled with suppressed excitement, but the high footsteps he had heard of my Gladys, who felt slightly disconcerted to find a stranger there, and no sign of Claude whatever. She advanced, however, in her pretty fluttering way, and held out a tiny hand, which Major de Lisle took and cordially pressed, for although this was not the rose, doubtless she had been here.

"Major de Lisle, I presume," said Gladys, in her bright young voice, and as she spoke, she could not help thinking what a goodly man this lover of her cousin's was.

He was tall and slight with a well-proportioned and well-built torso, which looked remarkably enduring. The face was that of a man who had thought and suffered; clear olive skin, and waving dark brown hair, and heavy, drooping moustache, kindly, deep brown eyes, that women, little children and animals always trusted at first sight. A clear mellow voice replied to the salutation, and a smiling light came into his dark eyes.

"Yes, that is my name I came here by Claude Meredith's invitation, and now as he has been unexpectedly recalled to town, I must introduce myself. He left this note for Miss Conway—"

Gladys looked as he felt, truly astonished, but held out her hand the least case it a feeble and tried to quiet his impatience with the soothing influence of a picked Havana. The following sentences broke from him between the puffs of his cigar—

"I never saw Gladys so odd before. Now, if I were a jealous kind of fellow—I repeat, if I were jealous, 'this last was very emphatic, accompanied by kicking a small pebble into the river. 'I should swear this was some old lover of hers, but it can't be. I'll never believe my Gladys, my little white dove, could so deceive me."

Here he took a quick walk along the miniature terrace which overhung the river.

"No, I don't believe it, and yet, how alas account for her sudden agitation at the mention of Denzil's name? It was that which so affected her, I'll swear—ah, here comes the fellow himself; I'll tackle him," going to meet him. "He's a duced good-looking, quite one's own idea of an officer and a gentleman. Ah, my dear fellow," as the two men met and cordially shook hands. "You've found us out. The girls will be very glad to see you. What a jolly day for a row, isn't it?"

"Yes, grand; but I'm afraid the fish won't bite; the sun's too bright."

"Oh, the fish are only an excuse. There's one of the prettiest girls in the world to spoon. Oh, you needn't shake your head and try to look solemn; wait till you've seen her. I'm sure Mrs. Conway—"

"Conway!" interrupted the other man quickly. "Did you say Conway?"

"Claude's face grew somewhat shadowed, as he answered—

"Yes, do you know her?"

"I know Mrs. Conway once—a very pretty girl. Has she a daughter?"

"Oh, yes," eagerly. "Gladys is—"

"That name—it must be the same."

He turned to Claude and holding out his hand, said, "Do you know I have searched everywhere for that girl for the last two years, but have been unable to hear of her? Lady Catherine Lennox is her aunt."

"She was—didn't you know that she is dead? But, tell me, old fellow, what do you know of Gladys? Where did you see her?"

"She is the only woman I ever loved," rejoined the other. "I love her still, though Heaven knows she treated me scandalously. We were everywhere together for a month. I followed her like her own shadow; she smiled but on me, though then I was poor and she scorned others, men who were rich and titled—"

"Gladys, are you sure it was Gladys Conway?"

"Sure. Do I know my own face in the glass? Not better than I know hers. Why, man, though I have not seen her for so long, but a pencil in my hand, and I draw her face, feature for feature, and line for line, as fair as it was. Of course Aunt Kate was a furious false. She fooled me to the top of my

"Anyhow, dear, we shall bear them together, I hope."

"Well, I'm off now. Au revoir."

And lifting his hat to Gladys, who came in sight at that moment, he hastily left the garden on his way to the station.

Gladys came quickly towards her cousin; she was looking pale and agitated, and there were large drops still glistening on the long eyelashes. She held a note toward Beatrice, looking at her piteously while she read it.

"What does it mean, Beatrice?" she said.

"The note reads as follows:—

"I leave you forever. I should never have believed you apparent open, and child-like nature could so have deceived one who trusted you so implicitly. If you had only told me of your love for Denzil de Lisle, I would have done everything in my power to bring you together. As it is, fate has been kind and brought him here. I will not reproach you with a single word. All I say is, may you be happier than you deserve to be."

"What does it all mean, Trix? What have I done? How have I deceived him? What can he mean?" she moaned.

HOW I FOUND MY WIFE.

BY AN OLD CONTRIBUTOR.

I was painting a picture in which I wished to introduce Titania, the fairy queen, but could find no model that would answer my purpose. At last, my friend, Harry Graham, told me of a little seamstress, Ruth Smith, that he thought would be just the model for me. I called to see her, and found that she was a veritable little fairy, and would be glad to sit as my model. So we settled it, and while I worked busily at the central figure of my large picture, I talked with the pretty model, and felt my interest vivified roused by her half disclosures of a life of sorrow and toil, that contradicted her moments of animation.

"I am a wife," she told me once. "The only errand I ever knew was a boat rocking on the ocean in front of a fisherman's hut. I was starved, ill treated, and ran away. But after all, while was a barefooted fisher girl, the carpenter's wife was good to me. She taught me to read and write, and lent me school books. I liked to study when I could snatch time. And she taught me to sing. I will never forget her."

She went to her work, touched a few chords, evidently playing only simple accompaniments, and sang. Where in her tiny form she possessed that glorious voice, I could only marvel. But she was crying in a moment after, and ran away before I could attempt to console her.

I began to wonder if I was in love with her; for I thought of her day and night, and painted my Titania with loving care.

It was nearly finished, one morning, as I worked, with Ruth sitting before me, Harry's voice in the hall said:

"This way," and a gruff, strange voice answered:

"All right, go 'n'or; I'm coming after you."

"Can I come in?" Harry called.

"No—oh, no!" whispered Ruth, coming to my side with a wistful motion. "Keep him out. I'll do it for him come in."

Before I could question her she darted into the dressing room and bolted the door. Making a virtue of necessity I left her there, and went to speak to Harry, my mind greatly disturbed at the dreadful agitation caused by the sound of his voice.

"Hello, Tom," he said, cheerfully. "By 'Titania' I said, scanning his face.

"O! the pretty little seamstress," he answered, carelessly; "but I have a jewel for you. A model for your picture of the brigand I Watson!"

Watson was standing near a window, looking out. When he faced me, I saw that he had the most villainous face I ever had the good fortune to behold. Upon every coarse feature was stamped the impress of brutality and vice.

I made a bargain with him, choosing hours when there was no danger of his encountering Ruth, for I could not bear the thought of his cruel eyes, and his heavy, hateful brown eyes. When he was gone Harry said:

"Isn't he a beauty? He came to my place on the tramp, and I secured him at once. Put your pointed hat and brigand dress on him and he will be a villain of villains."

Harry was so genial and frank about the picture that I ventured to ask:

"How did you come to know Miss Smith?"

"In the most prosaic way, my dear fellow. She sews for an aunt of mine, who recommended her to me, and I employed her."

It was so strange, when he spoke to her so coolly, to remember the white agitated face I had seen so lately, and I thought of it again and again. Finally I concluded that it was a case of unrequited affection, and that Harry had given nothing of his own heart to my Titania, giving nothing of his own in return.

I gave me keen pain to settle upon this conviction; for short as was our acquaintance, I found I was no longer master of my own heart, but had surrendered it to the soft brown eyes of my little model.

Yet I acknowledged modestly that I would have no chance of winning her, but she already given her heart to another man. I entered the lists against me. Handsomer than I, talented, agreeable, he could also offer all the allurements of wealth to the woman he loved.

It was to my surprise Ruth presented herself at the usual hour the next day. She was very pale, and her eyes had a terrified expression, but she said nothing of her fright; the previous day, excepting to ask me to admit no one to the studio during her sitting; a request I readily granted.

During the forenoon I spoke of Mr. Graham, and she answered, very quietly:

"I work for Mrs. Davenport, his aunt, and once I did some sewing for her. Mrs. Davenport has been very kind to me."

"They say Mrs. Davenport is very beautiful," I said.

"She is; and as good as she is beautiful. I think Mr. Graham will marry her some time."

Did this explain her avoidance of him, her agitation at the sound of his voice? I could only think so, and pained moodily and silently. She seemed to notice the change in my manner, for she too became silent and shy, looking troubled and evidently glad to be released when the sitting was over.

It was not a happy week that followed. I think Mr. Graham will marry her some time. I no longer felt my heart in my finger ends as I lingered over my Titania's face, and the original of the fairy queen, was pale and sad, most unlike the sparkling beauty I needed.

She came one morning when I was reading a note from Harry, and I put it on the table as I turned to speak to her. Her eyes fell upon it, and again that white, frozen look of horror came to her face; but she did not think she realized that she was committing an unpardonable rudeness in reading a note addressed to me. Her great brown eyes were full of misery as she lifted them at last.

"I ought to go to him," she faltered, with white lips.

"Go to him?" I stammered.

"She took up the note.

"The man—mentioned here, John Watson—who was hurt in the street—is dying. He—he is my father!"

My amazement led me dumb.

"I know you must think me hard, unattractive," she said, humbly; "but he was so sweet to me—so kind! He nearly killed me sometimes when he beat me, and he started me, often locking me up without food for two days if he was angry. When I heard him speak—that day—I thought he had come to claim me. But if he is dying, I must go to him. I will go with you," I said. "I meant to go at any rate. Poor child," I added, seeing how she trembled, "I can readily believe in his cruelty. He looks but a sorry protector for such a little creature as you are."

A grateful look thanked me, and some of the terror left Ruth's face as she accepted my escort to the hospital where the man had been taken.

"My name is Alice," she told me; "Alice Watson. But I thought Smith was such a common name I would not be found out if my father should look for me."

We found the man dying. He had been run over by a heavy train, and was fatally injured.

Something of a softened look came to his hard face as the child he had driven away by his cruelty bent over him, and touched his cheek with her pure lips.

"Eh!" he said feebly. "Is that you, Alice?" And the painter caught, "Perhaps," he said, brokenly, "you're sweet-heating."

"Yes," I said, boldly. And Alice only blushed.

"You've been good to me," he continued, every word a labor to utter, "so I'll tell you she is none of mine. She was taken off a wreck, and my wife kept her. I know nothing about her more than that; but she's not mine."

We did not leave him till he died. There was no romance discovered about Alice. I am happy, knowing nothing of her parents, but sure of her love and truth, and giving her the sweetest of all names—my wife.

A Question.

Promissuous osculation writes an exchange, is a mistake; one should draw the line at pretty coosins.

Promissuous osculation may be wrong, I will agree, but it is not kissing.

But promissuous osculation is not kissing two or three;

And when a pretty, dainty maid, with manners coy and shy,
Pats you on the cheek for a kiss, who could refuse!—not I.

Regarding pretty coosins—yes, it would be very nice.

At greeting and at parting, just to kiss them once or twice;

But that we should "draw the line at that" is just what troubles me.

And why we should, and how we could, I really cannot see.

If I no pretty coosin here, what then am I to do?

Enjoy imaginary bliss my weary life long through?

Without being very wicked could I not the role extend.

And in very desperation kiss the cousin of my friend?

—EMILY HOFFMAN.

The Journey to Siberia.

You see a marshy plain, where the icy winds blow freely, driving before it the snow that begins to cover the frozen soil. Mosses, with small shrubs or crumpled trees, bent down by wind and snow, as far as the eye can reach. The next village is 20 miles distant. Low mountains covered with thick pine forests, mingling with the grey snow-clods, rise in the distance on the horizon. A track, marked all along by poles to distinguish it from the surrounding plain. The party slowly moved along their road. In front, a row of soldiers opens the march. Behind them heavily laden the hard-labor convicts, with half-shaven heads, wearing grey clothes, with a yellow diamond on the back, and open shoes worn out by the long journey, and exhibiting the tatters in which the wounded feet are wrapped. Each convict wear a chain, riveted to his ankles, its rings being twisted into rings—if the convict has collected

Melbourne Gossip.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.) Exhibition! Exhibition! Exhibition! There has been nothing else thought of or talked of since Wednesday, and if my letter is to be a true reflex of "Melbourne Gossip," it must treat of nothing but the great show this week.

GARDENING FOR AUGUST.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Plant largely of early potatoes; sow parsnips upon rich deep soil—the latter ought to have been sown two feet or more. Sow peas largely—Badman's dwarf, blue imperial, champion of England, Burbridge's scilips, climax, and alliance are among the best for general purposes. Sow largely of the various kinds of broad beans in rows thirty inches apart. Established plantations of rhubarb and cauliflowers may be forced by covering the crowns over with pots or slates, and covering these again with fresh horse-manure. Plant globe artichokes in rich soil, in rows four feet six inches by three feet. Sow main crops of onions, also spinach, radish, and small salad.

FLOWER GARDEN.—If former directions have been carried out, there will not remain much to be done this month, with the exception of keeping all the walks, borders, and beds neat and clean.

FARM.—Continue ploughing and harrowing lands intended for spring cropping. Hoe drill crops. Continue sowing grasses, clover, lucerne, and peas; beans may still be sown in late localities. Oat and barley should be completed this month if the weather has been at all favourable.

Mr. C. Chapman.—Sir,—I have suffered from Neuralgia for the last ten years, finding no relief from anything. I tried medical advice, but it was of no use to me. I have used your Australian Foliage Balsam since, finding instant relief as soon as I apply it, and I do not now suffer any pain. I am thankful there is such a preparation for a terrible complaint. You are at liberty to make what use you like of this testimonial.

I remain, yours respectfully,

Mrs. SARAH J. MILLA.

Mr. C. Chapman.—Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the value of your Australian Foliage Balsam, it being most valuable in cases of Rheumatism, from which I suffered very severely for many months, that and linseed internally curing me when all other medicines had no effect. You are at liberty to make use of this if you think proper.—Yours faithfully,

ROBERT HORNBY.

THE FUNNIEST SHOW ON EARTH. The World-Renowned Fun Makers, PROF. S. S. BALDWIN, CLAIRVOYANT, MESSMERIST, THOUGHT READER, SPIRIT EXPOSER, MISS KATE RUSSELL (England's Greatest Sketch Artist), AND A TALENTED COMPANY.

It is seldom that strictly first-class companies can be seen in this country owing to the lack of scenery, stage room, &c., but Professor Baldwin's Entertainment can be given in any hall, and he carries with him all the costly and valuable apparatus to give such a Remarkable and Laughable Entertainment.

The startling Clairvoyancy is the world's greatest wonder. The Past, Present, and Future told. People desiring information merely think intently of the question. The Mesmerised Clairvoyant gives a correct answer, and then accurately states the question.

You can see the faces of your dead friends in the bright light. It is the Funniest Show on Earth.

It is the Greatest Entertainment ever given to anyone. It is clean and pure, and has been witnessed and endorsed by over 10,000 clergymen.

CLASS FOR ADVANCING SCHOLARS. TRAWALLA. MISS TAYLOR, at the request of a number of residents at Trawalla, has COMMENCED a CLASS for advancing scholars at the Trawalla school, and begs to intimate to those desirous of joining on the evening of Monday, Wednesday, and Friday in each week. Pupils joining after a quarter has commenced are charged only for that portion of the term to run. Terms on application at the school.

DEATH. THOMAS.—On the 11th instant, at Neil Street, Beaufort, Ebenezer Thomas, saddler, after a long and painful illness, aged 61 years.

THE Riponshire Advocate. Published every Saturday Morning. SATURDAY, 18th AUGUST.

LOCAL & GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

MISSED.—Approximate yields for the week:—Saxon Consols, 130oz.; Waterloo over 40 oz.

POLICE COURT.—Messrs. J. Prentice and Thomas J.P., presided at the Police Court, Beaufort, on Monday last, when they gave a verdict in the case Leadbaster

v. Thos Duffin, for debt. The amount claimed on the summons was £18 4d; but defendant having paid £1 on account, an order was made for the balance with 5s costs. Mr. Leadbaster, J.P., then took a seat on the bench. P. M. O'Connell obtained orders against the following:—Mary Ann Nolan, 14s 11d, costs, 5s; Daniel Smith, 17 8s 1d, costs, 1s 6d; Eliza Whiting, 16 8s 10d, costs, 1s 6d; Gustave Grant, 12 6s 7d, costs, 15s; and the hearing against R. Kerr was extended to August 27th. One inebriate was ordered to Ballarat Gaol Hospital for one week for medical treatment.

P.M. ANNUAL MISSIONS.—The Primitive Methodist annual mission services commenced to-morrow in the Beaufort church, the Rev. F. Sinden being announced to preach twice. Meetings will be held throughout the district during the week, at the Messrs. Simlen (Creswick) and Hetherington, and other gentlemen are appointed to take part.

RAINFALL.—The register for the week is 43 points.

STOCKTAKING.—An important notice in reference to Mr. McKeich's annual stock-taking, appears on our front page to-day.

THANKS.—Cr. Beggs, in another column, returns thanks to the ratepayers for retaining him as representative in the council for the north riding of the Shire of Ripon.

ACCIDENT.—On Monday evening, last, an elderly lady named Mrs. Walton, residing at Lexington, met with a serious mishap. She was trying to save a kettle from falling over, but failing in the attempt the boiling water poured out over her hands and arms, causing most painful burns. She was brought into Beaufort, and placed under the care of Dr. Johnston, and is, although suffering much pain, progressing fairly.

EDUCATION.—Miss Taylor, of Trawalla, notifies in our advertising columns to-day that she has, at the request of a number of residents, commenced an evening class for advancing scholars. The advantages offered are such as should be availed of at once by those for whom the class is intended, and it having been felt for a long time that such a class was required in the neighborhood, Miss Taylor will no doubt find her efforts to meet a great want duly appreciated.

SOCIAL.—On Wednesday evening a large number of friends of the Ladies' Working Society in connection with St. John's Church of England, Beaufort, assembled by invitation at the Societies' Hall to spend a social evening. It is needless all to praise those who always do well, but we cannot refrain from saying that the committee who undertook the management of the affair succeeded so well that the three or four hours' amusement was provided in such a manner that nothing but thorough enjoyment could result. As usual, the hall was beautifully decorated, and on the stage was spread a feast of choice delicacies, which, when the proper time arrived, were handed round with the accompaniment of a refreshing cup of tea or coffee, as desired, all of which refreshments the ladies prepared themselves. Everything passed off splendidly, there being occupation in various ways for both old and young. Dancing was the chief attraction for the latter, the music for which was contributed by several ladies in turn. During the intervals between the dances, some vocal music was rendered, Miss Bessie Isom, Miss Lily Stuart, Miss Cathie, and Messrs. Rose and R. Jackson taking part. A recitation was also given by Mr. Walter Eddy. Shortly before midnight Mr. A. Andrews moved a vote of thanks to the ladies for their generous hospitality; this was seconded by Mr. R. A. D. Sinclair, and carried by acclamation. The party broke up shortly afterwards.

620 LIVES LOST.—In 1866 the clipper ship Grey Eagle was burned near Hong Kong, most of the crew and over six hundred Chinese Coolies lost their lives. Sixteen years afterwards in San Francisco Captain Williams, attending Professor Baldwin's entertainment, thought the question, "What became of my brother?" The clairvoyant described the burning ship, and gave full particulars of the death of young Williams, who was an officer on the ship at the time of her loss. Many other incidents like this gave Baldwin a great name, and in Australia several years ago they created a great sensation. He is now on a return trip, and will appear in Beaufort next Monday and Tuesday evenings. Professor Baldwin's entertainment is extremely amusing and judging from the notices in other papers the audience is kept in a scream of laughter about half the time. The Professor calls his entertainment "the funniest show in the world," and from the press notices it fully deserves the title. Professor Baldwin's Entertainment has, during the past seven years, appeared in London for seven months, Dublin nine weeks, Sydney twenty-seven weeks, and thirty weeks in Melbourne. This alone is sufficient proof of its character. Generally, first class entertainments come to the smaller towns, owing to the lack of scenery, stage room, &c., but Professor Baldwin carries all his expensive apparatus and stage fittings with him, so that his senses are in just as good style as in the largest cities. The Clairvoyant is placed in a trance sleep. The people in the audience think of any question they wish answered, and, although those queries are not mentioned to any one, yet she gives correct answers, and then states the questions. It is said that she tells the whereabouts of lost or stolen articles, gives the addresses of long lost or absent friends, and other things of that nature. One special feature is Miss Russell's quick character changes. She takes eight or ten different characters (with appropriate songs), making the changes from one to another in some five or six seconds time. As almost everyone in Australia knows of Professor Baldwin, and there is much talk in town about his remarkable entertainment, in all probability the hall will be crowded.

BEAUFORT COMMON.—The monthly meeting was held on Wednesday last, there being present Messrs. Brown, Andrews and Cumming. The minutes of

Mother Seigel's OPERATING PILLS,

FOR CONSTIPATION, SLUGGISH LIVER, &c.

UNLIKE many kinds of cathartic medicines, do not make you feel worse before you feel better.

SEIGEL'S OPERATING PILLS are the best family physic that has ever been discovered.

The best remedy extant for the bane of our lives—constipation and sluggish liver.

These Pills prevent fever and all kinds of sickness, by removing all poisonous matter from the bowels.

If you take a severe cold, and are threatened with a fever, with pains in the head, back, and limbs, one or two doses of SEIGEL'S OPERATING PILLS will break up the cold and prevent the fever.

A coated tongue, with a brackish taste, is caused by foul matter in the stomach. A few doses of SEIGEL'S OPERATING PILLS will cleanse the stomach, remove the bad taste, and restore the appetite.

Oftentimes disease, or partially decayed food, causes sickness, nausea, and diarrhoea. If the bowels are cleansed from this impurity with a dose of SEIGEL'S OPERATING PILLS, these disagreeable effects will vanish, and good health will result.

SEIGEL'S OPERATING PILL prevent ill-effects from excess in eating or drinking. A good dose at bedtime renders a person fit for business in the morning.

These Pills being Sugar-coated, are pleasant to take. The disagreeable taste common to most pills is obviated.

Business Notices.

To our Readers and Patrons.

THE PROSPERITY OF A DISTRICT DEPENDS chiefly upon the support consequently given by the population to local enterprise and industry.

Therefore, Support Local Industry and Local Enterprise.

The law of exchange was never satisfactory in its working; thus it was that the custom of buying and selling a standard currency was introduced.

And as the Advocate of the interests and for the welfare of this district it has a claim for a considerably greater amount of support, and has a greater scope for extending usefulness than any other journal or journal within a given radius of the Shire Offices.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Wounds, and Ulcerations of all kinds.

There is no medicinal preparation which may be so successfully relied upon in the treatment of the above ailments as Holloway's Ointment.

Nothing can be more salutary than its action on the body both locally and constitutionally. The Ointment rubbed around the part affected enters the pores as salt permeates meat. It quickly penetrates to the source of the evil, and cures it.

For Granular Swellings, Stiff Joints and Displacements of the Joints.

This invaluable ointment has greater power over gout and rheumatism than any other preparation. None need remain in pain if it is used as directed. It is a good remedy, by using this infallible remedy according to printed instructions affixed to each pot. All settled aches and pains are remediable in the same manner.

Gout and Rheumatism.

There is no preparation for salutary effects comparable to this remedy. It should be well rubbed over the affected parts after their due formation with warm water. It acts by stimulating the absorbents to increased activity by preventing congestion and promoting a free and copious circulation in the parts affected. These results are effected by its action on the Piles, Fistulae, and Hemorrhoids.

The cure which this Ointment effects in healing piles and fistulae of long standing, after they have resisted all other applications, have been testified to by the use of this Ointment. It has been used in all parts of the world that any effect to give an adequate statement of their number or character would be in vain. It is sufficient to know that the Ointment has never proved inefficacious.

In Disorders of the Kidneys, Stone, and Gravel.

The Ointment is a sovereign remedy if it be rubbed twice a day into the small of the back, over the region of the kidneys, into which it will gradually penetrate, and in almost every case give immediate relief. Whenever the Ointment has been used it has established its own worth, and as again been eagerly sought for as the easiest and safest remedy in all disorders of the kidneys.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following complaints: Bad Legs, Fistulae, Scalds, Bad Breasts, Gout, Sore Throats, Burns, Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Bunions, Scabies, Dropsy, Chills, Lumbago, Sore Heads, Chapped hands, Piles, Tumours, Corns (soft), Rheumatism, Ulcers, Contracted and Sore Nipples, Wounds, Stiff Joints.

The Pills and Ointment are sold at Professor Holloway's Establishment, 78 New Oxford Street, London; also by nearly every respectable Vendor of Medicine throughout the Civilized World, in boxes and pots. The smallest box of Pills contains four dozen; and the smallest Pot of Ointment one ounce.

Full printed directions are affixed to each Box or Pot and can be had in any language, even in Turkish, Arabic, Armenian, Persian, or Chinese.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

No family should be without these Pills. Their long tried efficacy in correcting disorders of the liver and stomach, stimulating the bowels, and purifying the blood, has secured for them an imperishable name throughout the world.

A few doses produce comfort, a short continuance effects a complete cure. Invalids may look forward to this restorative and revivifying medicine with the certainty of obtaining relief.

How to enjoy Life.

It is only known when the blood is pure, its circulation perfect, and the nerves in good order. The only safe and certain method of expelling all impurities is to take Holloway's Pills, which have the power of cleansing the blood from all noxious matters, expelling all humors which taint or impoverish it, and thereby purify and invigorate and give general tone to the system.

Young and old, robust or delicate, may alike experience their beneficial effects. Myriads affirm that these Pills possess a marvellous power in securing these great secrets of health by purifying and regulating the fluids, and strengthening the solids.

Our Mothers and Daughters.

The functional irregularities peculiar to the weaker sex are invariably corrected without pain or inconvenience by the use of Holloway's Pills. They are the safest and purest medicine for all diseases incidental to females of all ages, and most precious at the turn of life, or when entering into womanhood.

Debilitated Constitutions—Bad Coughs.

In general debility, mental depression, and nervous depression, there is no medicine which operates so like a charm as these famous Pills. They soothe and strengthen the nerves and system generally, give tone to the stomach, elevate the spirits, and in fact render the patient capable of a total and most delightful revolution in his whole system. Thousands of persons have testified that, by their use alone, they have been restored to health after all other means have proved unsuccessful.

Indigestion and its Cure.

Indigestion, with torpidity of the liver, is the bane of thousands, who pass one day with accumulated sufferings, all of which may be avoided by taking these Pills according to the accompanying directions. They strengthen and invigorate every organ subservient to digestion, and effect a cure without debilitating or exhausting the system; on the contrary, they support and conserve the vital principle by a complete purification of the blood.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:—

Ague, Piles, Asthma, Rheumatism, Bilious Complaints, Retention of Urine, Itch of the Skin, Scalds, or King's Evil, Dropsy, Sore Throat, Stone and Gravel, Dropsy, Secondary Symptoms, Female Irregularities, Tic-Dolereux, Fevers of all kinds, Ulcers, Gonorrhoea, Venereal Affections, Headache, Worms of all kinds, Indigestion, Weakness from whatever cause, Liver Complaints, Evercuse, Lamboago, &c., &c.

The Pills and Ointment are sold at Professor Holloway's Establishment, 78 New Oxford Street, London; also by nearly every respectable Vendor of Medicine throughout the Civilized World, in boxes and pots. The smallest box of Pills contains four dozen, and the smallest Pot of Ointment one ounce.

Full printed directions are affixed to each Box, and can be had in any language, even in Turkish, Arabic, Armenian, Persian, or Chinese.

"Diseased Nature often times breaks forth in strange eruptions."—Act II. Scene I.

TO THE PUBLIC.

SOME patients suffering from nervous affections are afraid, from sheer habituality and modesty to PERSONALLY consult a medical man; other patients have not the self-possession and courage, when in the consulting room, to accurately describe their symptoms, their habits of life, and the nature of the disease they suffer from.

Let such person (he or she) sit quietly down in the privacy of their own apartments, and with calm mind describe by each symptom of their case, a clear statement of the nature and duration of the disease, when in the consulting room, to accurately describe their symptoms, their habits of life, and the nature of the disease they suffer from.

Amphitheatre, Nov. 27, 1886.

Mr. C. Chapman.—Sir,—I have suffered from Neuralgia for the last ten years, finding no relief from anything. I tried medical advice, but it was of no use to me. I have used your Australian Foliage Balsam since, finding instant relief as soon as I apply it, and I do not now suffer any pain. I am thankful there is such a preparation for so terrible a complaint. You are at liberty to make what use you like of this testimonial. I remain, yours respectfully,

Mrs. SARAH J. MILLS.

Buangor, January 20, 1887.

Mr. C. Chapman.—Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the value of your Australian Foliage Balsam, it being most valuable in cases of Rheumatism, from which I suffered very acutely for many months, and which internally curing me when all other medicines had no effect. You are at liberty to make use of this if you think proper.—Yours faithfully,

ROBERT HORNSBY.

It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease.
