

"COUNT SIX."

Mining News.

SONS OF FREEDOM JUNCTION COMPANY.

A group of friends sat sipping their muddy yellow bitters outside a cafe in the Boulevard Michel, and their conversation ran upon recently excented anarchist and the impetuosity with which they met their doom at the final hour.

Henri Callot grew excited.

"It is courage!" he exclaimed. "It is strength, fortitude, and a sign of a strong stomach and nerves of iron."

"Alors, donc!" rejoined Rousset, the pale, stern, cowardly, more likely."

"Kestell it tenez, monsieur!"

"Oui, et I believe I name it rightly."

"When you are a coward yourself, you have no stomach; no place, no nerve."

Several strangers crowded round the table, and, passively formed an attractive group upon the pavement. A pretty scene was expected. But the conversation was interrupted.

No; Jean Rousset looked very unlike an insulted man thirsting for revenge. Had not his fellow-students at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts been immediately assured of his pluck they would have denounced him, and so to vindictive shame and pitiful incompetence as a "wet hen!"

"Perhaps," replied Rousset, "you are unable to imagine yourself in the unique position of a man doomed to the gallows, but you may not always be so unfortunate."

"I should know how to die," said Callot loftily.

"Certainly. You would die as you were told. There could be no option. When the prison doors came to your cell and said: 'Your hour has come,' be courageous! If you were able to walk to M. Delibet's office, I think it would be the result of terror, not fortitude."

"Our opinions of our courage are at variance, M. Rousset. I am willing to put it to the test."

The crowd grew expectant again. "A show of bombast is not my idea of courage," replied Rousset. "Courage is exhibited, if at all, in a really terrible condition, in a really dangerous, menacing, crisis."

A slight murmur of admiration, and disappointment, arose from his table and walked away.

Henri Callot took a bookstall at one of the galleries outside the Odéon theater, and it was his custom each evening to take a constitutional in the Luxembourg garden opposite before adjourning to a cafe in the Boulevard Michel.

The rain one night prematurely drove the band out of the garden, and the others with him. Callot was not to be defamed from his opinions.

He had a regular course—in at the northeast gate, around the fountains and across the garden to where the gay parties that night looked swamped and sorry.

He usually sat on a bench near the western railings, and the rain was heavy, and darkness was falling rapidly, so he took a return path, striding leisurely, with his umbrella well down over his shoulders.

On a sudden he stopped, lifted his umbrella to aid his vision and listened. "That surely wasn't thunder!" he said aloud.

He was answered by an unearthly shriek.

The unexpected reply made him start and look behind him. But no human thing was visible. He peered right and left into the shadows and assumed an air of indifference. Neither was he afraid to see. His impulse was to walk quickly away, and he was about to obey it, but was arrested by a repetition of the noise, unmistakably close at hand.

He felt creeps.

That sound emanated from no human throat. The strongest lungs were incapable of yielding so earthy a blast, no vocal chords produce it. A tram car horn with a sharp bellowing at the end might suffice it.

By accident his eyes fell upon the bronze statuary near the railings not 90 feet distant, representing a Faun playing with a panther.

"Holy Virgin!" he exclaimed involuntarily.

The jaws of the panther were moving! And when they had opened they belched again more terribly than before.

A cold shudder shook Callot. He would have fled, had he wiser sense. The slow-moving jaws opening and shutting with strange regularity, fascinated him. He knew the animal well. He had scanned it with curiosity many a time when it was a mere lump of immovable bronze, with jaws rigidly set that now parted and closed, and eyes benignly gazing that now glared with the zest of a coming meal.

And he was sure the beast's head was swollen with excitement.

"Holy Virgin!" he exclaimed again and drew back, expecting each second to see the animal spring to feel its hungry breath and the blow of its striking body.

But the panther did not spring. It only moved its massive jaws and bellowed and followed more terribly than before. A cold shudder shook Callot. He would have fled, had he wiser sense. Give your orders for JOB PRINTING to the newspaper in your district, because it prints thousands of reports and notifications for which it receives no payment whatever. It is always spending its time and money to benefit and improve the prospects of the place through which it circulates. It gives you value in return for your printing order.

An advertisement is a paper man's marketable commodity, and it is quite as much so as a side of bacon, a pound of butter, or a ton of flour. No man can afford to give away the things he sells for a livelihood, and the man who does so in order to get business is generally in a bad way. Don't try to put the paper man "in a bad way." But exercise a little human nature. Support him; he needs encouragement and support; but do it in the legitimate way. If the printer gets a few pounds worth of printing orders from you, he is not in a position to give you a pound's worth of advertising for nothing. And you have had value for the printing already. Go into a grocer's or draper's for 1.3 worth of goods, and the grocer's man or draper will not throw it gratis. It is worth of something else that you may ask for. Try him; you don't believe us.

Dr. Binder announces that he will address the electors at Raglan next Tuesday evening.Mr. R. E. John, P.M., sat as a Licensing Court at Beauport on Monday, and granted the transfer of the license for the Spring Hotel, Waubra, from A. K. Dower to John Christie, as also a temporary license to Dennis Maher for 27th inst. at the Beauport Agricultural Society's show; there being no opposition by the licensing-inspector to either application.The Travellers and Sailors' Gulf State schools have been supplied with flagstaffs, baldars, and flags, and are now in efficient readiness for the proclamation of peace, or the opening of the Commonwealth Parliament.
The total expense in connection with the former school has been voluntarily borne by Messrs. Campbell and Felton, of Lang-kall, and that of the latter by Rear-Admiral Bridges, of Travalla.Some days ago we ("Star") mentioned that the superintendent and secretary of the Hospital had received a cheque for £25 from Messrs. Sinclair and Wotherspoon, representing the recent subscription of the former school. The amount was given in aid of the work of the ladies of Beauport, instead of the usual effort in the shape of a bazaar or concert or ball. The matter came before the meeting of the general committee, when Mr. A. Anderson said he thought such a donation deserved a special recognition, inasmuch as it was a new departure, by which the whole of the money given by the charitably inclined found its way to the institution. It was a truly noble effort, and the ladies, in this case set a splendid example, which he hoped would be copied by other districts which received large benefits from the institution. He moved that a letter be forwarded to the Beauport ladies, specially recognising their splendid efforts and expressing the grateful thanks of the committee for their laboraand the magnificent result achieved. The resolution was unanimously carried with heartfelt applause.Mrs. Wotherspoon and Miss Sinclair, members of the general committee, have received the following letter from Mr. Francis C. Easton, Secretary of Ballarat District Hospital...
"Ladies.—Your letters of the 4th and 11th inst.
were duly placed before the committee of management at their meeting held yesterday (13th inst.).
I have had them by their direction to thank you for your very handsome donation to thank you for conveying their thanks to the ladies of Beauport and district, who by their energy have brought about such a magnificent result.
I enclose herewith a copy of the receipt for £25, making a total sum of £125."Cheques for £1000 are warranted to cure the following all acquired or constitutional Discharges from the Urinary Organs, Gravel, and Pains in the Back. Free from Mercury.

pany, Lincoln, England.Mr. Osman, M.L.C., died Monday evening at Stawell. He was in Stawell on Saturday, but was not well that evening.
He was no better on Sunday, but refused to see a doctor. Monday morning his condition was seen to be serious, and Drs.
Fox and Aitken, who were called in consultation, held out no hope of his recovery.
The patient was unconscious when the medical men arrived, and remained so till his death. He was born at Devon, his father who was a surgeon in the Royal Navy, being present at the battle of Trafalgar.
The deceased joined the navy, and served in the fleet against Tripoli and the West Coast of Africa, putting down the slave trade.
He was serving the vessel to England when the other officers were down with fever he was promoted to the position of sub-lieutenant.
He resigned, came to Australia in 1854, and settled at Pleasant Creek, now Stawell. He engaged in mining, and made a fortune from the North Cross reef.

As this Mixture is pleasant to the taste, and free from anything injurious to the most delicate constitution of either sex, from infancy to old age, the Proprietor solicit subscribers to give it a trial.

A few drops of this Mixture will do much good.

It is a wonderful cure for Gout and Rheumatic pains. It removes the cause from the Blood and Bones.

Mr James Balcombe writes:—

"I suffered when in the Army from a severe attack of the Liver, and was sent home from India to the hospital. It was one of the worst cases

I have ever seen. I was told to go to the hospital, where I remained for eight months.

I was then told nothing more could be done for me, and was discharged and sent home. I tried other doctors, but none of them were of any service.

At last I saw Clarke's Blood Mixture advertisement. I tried some, and after the first large bottle found myself very much better. I continued with it, and it made a perfect cure of me. I can truly say Clarke's Blood Mixture is a wonderful medicine. —Falmouth-chamber, Falmouth-road,

"New Kent-road, S.E., July 8, 1899."

"P.S.—I should like to mention the when sending a relative for the second bottle from the neighbouring druggist, she pointed her to take a proportion of their own, which they do not "just as good." I found this did me no good at all.

It was, therefore, sent back, and the genuine article procured, with above result."

Mr W. Pauly, Broad Lane, Chesham, Cambridge, writes:—

"I had a slight attack of rheumatism, and was obliged to send a doctor to my house.

A man, who told me it was Eczema, I underwent some time, but got no better.

I tried, I may say, scores of other medicines, but all to no purpose, and was compelled to go to a specialist.

There I was under great treatment; but got no better, and came out un cured; in fact, worse than when I went in.

I was now covered from head to foot, and was so tormented that I almost wished I had died; one night I told my wife I never should get better. I think I may truly say that my case was one of the worst it was possible to have,

and everyone said they had never seen anyone like me. Well, at last I read about Clarke's

Blood Mixture, and determined to get a trial.

I purchased some of Clarke's Chemists and took it according to rules for three months, nine days a week, and am thankful to say

I am now perfectly well, with my skin as clear as possible. It was Clarke's Blood Mixture which effected this wonderful cure, and I cannot recommend it too highly. January 20, 1900."

Colonel Commandant Instructor Jno. Howarth,

Cheshire Regiment, Chester, writes:—Lauffered from Rheumatism in my arms and legs for over five years. I also had a bruise in this bone through which I could pass only a few minutes at a time. All sorts of remedies were applied, but did not do any good for more than a few days. After a while I was recommended to try Clarke's Blood Mixture, which I did and on taking the first bottle I felt relief, and therefore continued with the excellent medicine, and it effectually cured me.

This was more than a year ago, and I am pleased to say I have not felt least pain since—in fact, I am as good health as ever I was in my life.

"Moreover, I told two friends of mine who were laid up with Rheumatism to take this.

They are tailors by trade, and in seven days they were at work again. They say this medicine cannot be too highly praised." May 18, 1899."

Mr George Price, St. Margaret-on-Thames, writes:—

"I feel that I shall be of great service to you in your work, and I hope you will allow me to add a few words in regard to Clarke's Blood Mixture.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a Great Favorite.

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cure have made it a great favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children for colds, cough and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief; and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. Nelson Province: Election.

Mr. S. G. Black, who is contesting the seat for the Nelson Province in the Legislative Council remained vacant by the death of the Hon. W. H. Osmond, visited the Beaumaris Agricultural Show on Wednesday. He was introduced by district friends to a large number of electors, and met with very encouraging assurances of support. Mr. Black created a very favorable impression, and the opinion is freely expressed that he will poll heavily throughout this district. Mr. Black is announced to address the electors in the Societies' Hall, Beaumaris, on Tuesday, 29th March, at 8 p.m.

A meeting of supporters of Mr. S. G. Black, in his candidature for the Nelson Province election, was held yesterday afternoon at the Commercial Hotel. There were about 40 gentlemen present. Mr. H. Macrae occupied the chair. The meeting was an enthusiastic one. A large working committee was appointed; with Mr. V. A. Ellis as secretary. The district was mapped out into sections, and certain work was allotted to each member of the committee. The electors' roll was gone through, and other necessary preliminary business was transacted. It was decided to meet again on Friday next at 5 p.m. at Nebo's Hotel. Arrangements were made for Mr. Black's address to the electors at Tengarong, the date fixed is Friday next, March 1st, and the time 8 p.m. Unfortunately it was found that he could not be seated for that evening owing to the flower show in the large room he had been engaged at. Mr. Thomas Montgomery, who is a candidate for the vacant seat in the Legislative Council, addressed a large meeting on Saturday night at Mortlake, and was well received. He announced that he was in favour of reform of the Upper House, and a reduction of the qualification to not more than £50. He considered the present members not properly represented, and the present members were outsiders. He would favor an increase of the vote for the encouragement of the mining industry, was in favour of woman suffrage, opposed to the introduction of the Bible in State schools, and favored closer settlement and the purchase of large estates for that purpose.

Mr. S. G. Black has been up north, his friends reeking that the north being the heavy end should be worked without delay, especially as the Black Bros. are to stand favorably known down there. Mr. Black's connection with the dairy industry, he brought him prominently before the State, and the speakers speak of the warmth of the brothers—and it is quite common to hear the remark—they are splendid landlords, all sterling "white men". Before the dairy industry started they were known for their brands of cattle and sheep, and are now well known for their butter industry. Through the introduction of which they have largely increased. We were told that otherwise Mr. Black did not seek fresh fields, and that at the outset was not accomplished without considerable loss.

A SONG OF SUMMER TIME.

On the swaying of the branches and the singing through the trees,
And the music of the voices that come up
From the winging and the winging of the birds
That come and go.
The trilling of the squirrels as they scamper
Up the trees and lay carpets, and the worms
In the dark earth cool.
So I stealing through the shadows find
Some clear, unsullied pool
The trilling of the songbirds
From the bushes and the grass.
And the gleaming of the sunlight
On the waters as we pass!

On the gleaming of the sunlight as it strikes
The waters clear,
And the songbirds of the bushes, and the other songs we hear!
On the boating and the floating on the water
Of the lake,
And the ripples and the shadows that go down
From the sun's rays of pleasure, and the place
To night to dream.
When the stars look down and twinkles,
The winged lanterns gleam!

On the summer in the country,
When the sun goes down and dies.
And the woods and waters bring
That the woods and waters bring.

—Frank H. Sweet in Donisthorpe's Magazine.

MARIE.

During the "reign of terror" in France there were many deeds of daring performed, even by women, and many noble examples of affection exhibited.

The very streets of Paris were deluged with human blood, but near the guillotine it ran in gushing torrents.

A dark morning an unusual number of the aristocracy had been marched forth, and countless heads rolled from the block.

A gaping multitude stood by, and with shouts rent the air as the aristocrats were thus butchered.

Among the assembled multitude that dreary morning were two women. One of them was plainly clad, while a cloak was thrown around her, with which she kept her features nearly concealed.

But a close observation would betray the fact that the woman had been weeping.

Her eyes were inflamed' and red, and she gazed eagerly upon the platform, while a shudder passed over her frame; as each shock of the glittering knife severed the head from the body of some one who had been unfortunate enough to fall under the ban of the leaders.

The face of the woman was very beautiful, and she was young, certainly not more than 16 or 18 years of age.

The other woman was quite different in character. Her face was fair, but there was a brazen expression about it, she was old in rags, and as each head fell she would dance, and in various ways express her delight, and then exclaim:

"There falls another aristocrat who deserves my charity when I humbly sue to him!"

Each expression of the kind would excite a laugh from those who heard her, but any thoughtful person must wonder how one so young could have become so depraved.

The first woman watched this creature for a few moments, and then pressing her way to her side she laid her hand upon the shoulder of the wretched and whispered:

"Would you like to become rich at once?"

The woman in rage turned about with a look of surprise, burst into a loud laugh and then replied:

"Of course I would!"

"Follow me, and you shall be."

"Enough! Lead on."

It was with considerable difficulty that the females extricated themselves from the crowd, but they did so at length, and then the first woman asked of the other:

"What shall I call you?"

"Oh, I'm called the beggar girl Marie!"

"You live by begging?"

"Yes; but what's your name, and what do you want?"

"My name is Marie, the same as yours."

"Are you an aristocrat?"

"It does not matter. If you know where we can find a room, lead me to it, and you shall have gold."

The pauper led the way into a narrow and filthy street and then down into a cellar and into a dark and filthy room.

The other woman could not feel a sickening sensation creep over her, but she recovered herself. After contemplating for some time the apartment and what it contained she asked:

"Are you well known in Paris?"

"Yes, everybody knows Marie, the beggar girl."

"Are you known to Robespierre? If so, I want to make a bargain with you."

"I am. What do you wish?"

"You see my clothing is better than your own, and I wish to exchange with you. I want you to consent to remain here, and not to show yourself at all for a short time, or until I come to you again. As recompence for aiding me I will give you 1,000 francs, and when I come back I will give you 1,000 more. As security for my return, take this ring."

The lady drew a diamond ring from her finger and gave it to the beggar girl. Then she handed her a purse containing gold.

The girl appeared a little puzzled and asked:

"Well, what are you going to do with my dress?"

"I want to put it on and go where I first met you."

"Oh, I understand now. You want to see the chopping go on, and you are afraid you will be taken for an aristocrat if you wear that dress. You want to represent me?"

"Yes, I want to look as near like you as possible."

"Well, that won't be very difficult. Your hair and eyes and even your mouth are like mine. Your face is too white, though. But you can alter that with a little dirt."

They exchanged dresses, and soon the young, rich and noble Marie de Nantes was clad in the rags of Marie, the beggar girl of Paris.

The history of Marie de Nantes was a sad one. Her father and two brothers had fallen victims to the remorseless friends of the revolution, and a third and last brother had been seized. But of his fate she was ignorant, although she expected that it would be similar to that of her other relatives. He had been born from her side but a few hours before.

After the exchange had been made the pauper looked on the stockings and shoes of feet and ankles of the lady and said:

"That will never do. Your feet are too white and delicate. Let me arrange matters."

In a few moments Marie was prepared, and in the fifth and rage she emerged into the street.

She now took her course back toward the guillotine, and at length reached the square where the bloody work was still going on.

Gradually she forced her way through the crowd, and nearer and nearer she came to the scaffold.

She even forced a laugh at several remarkers who had turned around her, but these laughed somberly.

She now stood within a few feet of the platform and swept it with her eyes, but her brother was not there.

The cry was now raised:

"Here comes another batch!"

Her heart fluttered violently, and she felt a faintness come over her as she heard the tramp of the doomed men approaching.

Her brother walked proudly and fearlessly forward and ascended the steps which led to the block.

Up to this moment the strength of poor Marie had failed her; and she was unable to pull herself into execution.

But now a sister's love swelled up in her breast, and she recovered her strength.

She sprang forward, bursting through the lines of guards, and ran up the steps.

Grasping her brother by the hand, she cried:

"What does this mean? It is only the aristocrats that are to die!"

"Away, woman!" exclaimed one of the executioners.

"No; I will not stay until you tell me why my brother is here and thus bound."

"Your brother?" was the echo.

"Yes, this is my brother."

"Well, who are you?"

"I am Marie; don't you know me?"

"The beggar girl!"

"Aye."

"But this is not your brother?"

"It is. Ask him—ask him."

Young Antonio de Nantes had turned a scornful gaze upon the maiden, but a light passed across his face, and he murmured:

"Oh, my sister!"

"Is this your brother?" asked Robespierre of the supposed beggar, advancing near her.

"It is."

"But his name is down differently."

"Then you are mistaken. He is my brother. Ask him."

"Does Marie speak the truth?" asked Robespierre.

"She does," was the brother's reply.

"And you are not De Nantes?"

"I tell you I am her brother."

"Why did you not tell us this before?"

"I attempted to speak, but was silenced."

"But you might have declared yourself."

"You would not have believed me."

"But your dress?"

"It belonged to an aristocrat, perhapse to him for whom I was taken."

Robespierre advanced close to his face. Then he approached Marie and looked steadily in her eyes for a short time.

It was a moment of trial for the poor girl. She trembled in spite of all her efforts to be calm. She almost felt that she was lost, when the human hand, whose word was law, turned and said:

"The chains were instantly removed, and Antonio de Nantes walked down from the scaffold, followed by his sister, while the shouts of those around rent the air, for they supposed he was a commoner who had thus been saved.

"What shall I call you?"

"Oh, I'm called the beggar girl Marie!"

"You live by begging?"

"Yes; but what's your name, and what do you want?"

"My name is Marie, the same as yours."

"Are you an aristocrat?"

"It does not matter. If you know where we can find a room, lead me to it, and you shall have gold."

The pauper led the way into a narrow and filthy street and then down into a cellar and into a dark and filthy room.

The other woman could not feel a sickening sensation creep over her, but she recovered herself. After contemplating for some time the apartment and what it contained she asked:

"Are you well known in Paris?"

"Yes, everybody knows Marie, the beggar girl."

"Are you known to Robespierre? If so, I want to make a bargain with you."

"I am. What do you wish?"

"You see my clothing is better than your own, and I wish to exchange with you. I want you to consent to remain here, and not to show yourself at all for a short time, or until I come to you again. As recompence for aiding me I will give you 1,000 francs, and when I come back I will give you 1,000 more. As security for my return, take this ring."

The lady drew a diamond ring from her finger and gave it to the beggar girl. Then she handed her a purse containing gold.

The girl appeared a little puzzled and asked:

"Well, what are you going to do with my dress?"

"I want to put it on and go where I first met you."

"Oh, I understand now. You want to see the chopping go on, and you are afraid you will be taken for an aristocrat if you wear that dress. You want to represent me?"

"Yes, I want to look as near like you as possible."

"Well, that won't be very difficult. Your hair and eyes and even your mouth are like mine. Your face is too white, though. But you can alter that with a little dirt."

They exchanged dresses, and soon the young, rich and noble Marie de Nantes
