THE CASE OF LADY BROADSTONE.

By A. W. MARCHMONT.

(All Rights Reserved.) I think it is well to be told that the case of Lady Broadstone is a very interesting one. It is a story of a woman who has been married for many years to a man who is now dead. She is a woman of high social position and has a large fortune. She is now in a very delicate state of health and is being nursed by a young man who is her only friend. The story is told in a very interesting and dramatic way. It is a story of a woman who has been married for many years to a man who is now dead. WISE AND OTHERWISE.

Mrs. Brown: "There isn't a boy in this town who is as clever as our Tom." Mrs. Black: "How is that?" Mrs. Brown: "Look at these two chaps. Tom made them out of his own head, and he has enough wood left to make an armchair." In a workshop the men were discussing the chances of the horses in a forthcoming race, to the bewilderment of a youth who was entirely unacquainted with the intricacies of horse racing. "Well," said one man, "I rather fancy so-and-so." "But," interjected another, "that's a scratch." The youth said, innocently, "Well, what of that? I don't suppose a scratch will make much difference to a really good horse." A certain cantankerous old gentleman not long ago advertised for a coachman, who was required, among other qualifications, to possess an intimate acquaintance with the neighbourhood, but to his surprise he received not a single application for the post. "I cannot understand it at all," he said, during a chat one day with an ostler at the local village stables he had mentioned the fact to. "Let me see," said the latter, as a plain of intelligence flitted across his face. "You advertised, I believe, for one who must be well acquainted with the neighbourhood, didn't ye?" "I did," replied the old gentleman, shortly. "I want someone who knows his way about." "Ah, that explains it!" was the answer. "Ye see, as knows the neighbourhood 'ud know you, too!" A man with a keen sense of the humour of American hustle is responsible for the following: "The best time achieved for assembling a car complete is forty seconds, and the latest development of time-saving methods at one factory is for a customer to pass his cheque into a slot machine in the counting-house and press a button, whereupon he is whisked along on a travelling pathway at thirty miles an hour to the delivery end of the factory, three-quarters of a mile away. "There he finds his car ready, with the engine running, all built during the short interval occupied in getting to the exit. As he passes through the exit gates a mechanical hand shoots out and hands him a cigar, whilst a concealed gramophone wishes him 'good day and good luck.'" An absent-minded professor invited a number of learned Scotsmen to visit some interesting ruins in his neighbourhood, and to do honour to his guests he donned Highland dress for the occasion. "There was to be a luncheon in a large manor on the lawn, and when the master of the house appeared in all the glory of a kilt, the astonishment of Jane, the housemaid, was great. "Thinking her master was in one of his vacant moods, she rushed upstairs and in a few minutes reappeared on the lawn with a pair of the professor's best trousers. She blushed as she said, pointing to the bare knees of the astonished Scot: "Please, sir, you've forgotten these." The pile of flints still to be broken was a very large one, though the stonebreaker as he gazed at it disconsolately between his bites at a large sandwich of bread and cheese. A minister came along and gave him a cheery "Good morning," remarking afterwards that he had a deal of work to get through yet. "Aye," said the cater, "them stones are like the Ten Commandments." "In what way?" inquired the clergyman. "You can go on breaking them," came the reply, "but you can't never get rid of 'em." A well-known politician told this recently: "I have a very dear old housekeeper; she is aged, but she has been like a mother to me. A little while ago I noticed that my silver shaving mug was slightly tarnished, and I asked the old lady to polish it for me. The next morning I found it shining like the sun. I completed my toilet, and then went into the kitchen to thank her for her kindness. "Mrs. G., I said, 'my mug looks a lot better this morning.' "It surely does, sir," she replied, glancing at me. 'You always look a lot better with a clean shave.'" One day an Englishman, a Scotsman, and an Irishman stole respectively a horse, a cow, and a cart. They were walking home when they suddenly met the farmer. "Where did you get that horse?" "I had it since it was a colt," said the Englishman. "Where did you get that cow?" "Oh, I have had it since it was a calf," said the Scotsman. "Where did you get that cart?" "Shure," said the Irishman, "I had it since it was a wheelbarrow!" "I hope my little Tommy has taken to heart mamma's talk of last night about charity and usefulness," said a fond mother. "How many acts of kindness has he done? How many hearts has my Tommy made grateful and glad?" "I've done a whole lot of good," Tommy replied. "I gave your new hat to a beggar woman, and I gave your shoes to a little girl in the street, and pa's black evening suit that he hardly ever wears to a poor lame bootlace seller." Sympathetic Officer: "Is he fatally wounded, do you think?" Irish Nurse: "I think two or three is not an if we can have him rest quiet for a while, he may come around all right."
