Your local Printer spends his money with you, as also does his staff; so indirectly money spent with him, or portion of it, must assuredly, through different channels of circulation, find its way back to your own coffers. Bear this in mind, and when you require anything with printers' ink on it, don't forget to support local industry. Bear in mind that money sent to Melbourne printers is absolutely losi to the town and district, and has no possible chance of ever returning, even by the most roundabout channels of circulation. The local man has undoubtedly the best claim on your orders, and by encouraging him you are helping to build up your own town.

> Whereupon Tom took a different view of the duties incumbent upon grandchildren; and so that day and several succeeding days passed in pleasant dalliance, for they had so much to tell one another; but there was one thing that Nancy shrank from telling Tom - she could not bring herself to talk of Sir Francis March's ridiculous accusation of him and persecution of herself. She wisted to forget that unpleasant epicode in her present happiness.

But although they might find it preferable to be left to themselves, Lady Childeroy could not omit her social duties, and Tom had to be shown to numerous family friends and distant relations. A night was fixed for a large dinner party, and with it an alarming array of guests. There was Sir John Grigson, J.P., and Lady Grigson; there was Mr. Killick, a poor relation, who always told three anecdotes during a party with clockwork regularity; there was Dr. Primmer and his two daughters -the plain one who sang, and the pretty one who did nothing but simper. The "old buffer" was one "Well, Tom," he said, "she's a nice of the portraits on the wall-Sir Bevis Childeroy, who had worn ermine when George II was King.

While Tom was contentedly eating his dinner and contrasting his present lot with his former loneliness, the butler stooped down and said, softly, in his ear, "There's some one wishing to see you, sir." "Who is it? Can't he wait?" ask-

sir. It's a police inspector." "Tell him I'll be out in a minute, said Tom; and as the butler walked noiselessly away, he turned to Naney and said, "I expect it is something to do with Lindsay's death." Then, excusing himself to Lady Childeroy, he followed the butler. Now, although the latter had spoken in the gentlest of tones, more than one guest had heard the ominous words "police inspector," and a sudden, momentary hush followed Tom's departure.
