OBITUARY.

Some were uncertain about Liddell, and some were certain. It was no diagrace to the council to turn Liddell down.

Cr. Stewart said he supported Liddell, who had not had a fair deal and should get a trial again. They were costing the ratepayers a lot by losing time. He did not care a darm what the ratepayers's said.

Cr. Mackenzie—He did not think the state of the engine should be taken into consideration so much, as he had found the steam roller in an appalling state. Cr. Kirkpatrick—He supported the new man, because they had not got the output for the past two years. Engines driven by other men about here would not be in this state.

The engineer—They could hardly blame Liddell for not making the crusher go, when another tip-top man could not do it. He should be given ashow.

Cr. Eider disagreed with Mr Muntz and said he was in favor of appointing new man.

Cr. McChonald—He had not got if from Ross himself.

Upon a ballot being taken, four councilors voted for the amendment and five against, and Straughan was accordingly appointed.

Cr. McDonald moved that Ross besided to take charge of the engine and plant for anything up to a month. Seconded by Cr. Elder.

De Blowitz's hat instead of his own, and the correspondent thereupon took possession of the hat containing the news.

One day the conspirators had a scare, for one of De Blowitz's rivals took the hat by mistake! Luckily he returned it without finding what was hidden inside. Thus 'The Times.' alone of the newspapers, had accounts of what the Conference was doing.

Another story concerning De Blowitz is as follows:-

was very anxious to obtain the treaty that was to be signed. He managed to get a copy of part of it, and persuaded one of the diplomats to read the missing portions to him. He then went back to his hotel and dictated to his secretary all that he had heard word for word.

De Blowitz left Berlin with the treaty stitched up in his waistcoat, and 'The Times' published it before it was signed, one of the greatest "scoops" in the history of journal-

The author tells an amusing story of Lord Palmerston, the famous Victorian Prime Minister. "The wife of a poor agricultural labourer had been awarded by the Labourers' Encouragement Association fifteen shillings for her praiseworthy domestic energy during the year. 'The Scriptures have it,' said 'Pam,' when presenting the prize, 'that a virtuous wife is a dirt and dust upon the clothing of crown to her husband; but here is one who is worth three crowns to her helpmate.' "

"The Light of Other Days" contains several amusing stories of Sarah Bernhardt. She was playing at the Gaiety Theatre in London and was in the habit of catching the train back to her hotel at Richmond after the play. Once, however, she missed
