Novy, in Body Construction Ford offers Traditional Quality

The distinctive appearance of the Improved Ford Touring Car is immediately arresting. It has an air of inherent quality. The longer body and streamline design on lower chassis are particularly notable. But consider the enduring standard

The whole front end of the body, to the rear of the front door, is of steel.

The Cowl is formed and pressed in one piece, eliminating joints in the body. It is bolted to a steel frame, giving great strength to the front of the car and further protecting the driver. Back of front seat is of drawn steel, in one piece, and is welded, riveted and bolted to body brace to ensure rigidity and great strength.

Rear mudguards are bolted on to the body, which is recessed for this purpose.

Additional louvres have been added to the Bonnet, making a total of eighteen on either side.

Radiator Shells and Head Lamp rims are nickelled. Running Boards are wider and heavier.

Tyre Carrier support is much stronger, the tube being the same type as that used for the rear Hood Rests are a part of standard equipment and are removable at will.

All steel parts are both riveted and welded.

All Pillars are braced by heavy steel stampings formed to shape under pressure.
All joints in wood-work are fully mortised, glued and screwed. Bolts, with nuts and lock washers, replace screws through the body wherever practicable

Chalders, from an easy distance, only managed a behind for Warrak. The attack was continued, but "Bowe" Wilkinson, who was playing a good game relieved the pressure, and aided by Wallish and Hyde, the sphere of contention changed to the opposite end of the ground, and Goatley added Raglan's second goal. Warrak was tenext to score a minor point. Then Raglan renewed the attack, and Loo marked quite close to goal, but only registered a behind. "Hippy" Davis however, shortly afterwards did the trick by scoring a nice. "sixer". Warrak then took possession of the oval, and McDonald, from an easy distance had the bad luck to hit the goal post. Raglan again assumed the offensive but "Twomey" Allender finely relieved, and the first quarter ended with the score was as follow:— Raglan, 3 goals 2 behinds; Warrak, 5 behinds. Each side had the same number of scoring shots.
