PRICES AND CITIZENS' DUTY

By H. D. BLACK, M.Ec. (Senior Lecturer in Economics, University of Sydney)

Control of prices is changing | There are times when an increas from the Commonwealth to the in spending is desirable to raise States. Some may think that this the state of business confidence and is their opportunity to evade price activity; and to increase employcontrol, and to behave budly ment and investment. There are
Whether the mechanics of price other times when the pressure of the duty of the clilzen to see that the system works efficiently. So long as a kind of suppressed inflation lingers, in the economic system, there will be some degree of price control necessary. Without it individuals anxious to exert the full strength of their spending power would be able to force prices up in certain lines and so cut some eiviland buyers off from supplies. The need for reasonable restraint, for the avoidance of a spending spree, in factorized in the system is simply a general marking up of prices. When production cannot respond to a big wave of demand, prices go up.

It reduces in fationary forces to more managethe avoidance of a spending spree, flationary forces to more manage is still with us.

Price control is devised to meet a Shortly, citizens in our demospecial set of circumstances and can master the problem if all producers and buyers alike remember that a citizen in a democracy has a difficult but fine role to play. He should, I think, take into account not only his own needs and what he has to spend on them but also the citizen also must play his part in bes to spend on them, but also the citizen also must play his part in effect of his actions upon others.

PROGRESS ASSOCIATION. Mr A. Rowe presided at the Progress Association meeting in the Mechanics' supper room on Tuesday evening. 17th Aug. Apologies were received from Mrs Rowe, and Messrs. Primrose, W. N. Sturgeon, Sinclair, W. W. Sturgeon, and Johnson. It was reported that permission had been granted Mr Marks to run a bus service, via Carngham, to Ballarat, leaving Skipton at 7.'0 a.m. The service would begin after the football season. The secretary intimated that permission had been granted for the building of a new Hospital in Skipton, and the committee would meet and arrange for the raising of funds to finance same in the near future. Mr Norman reported that he had received no reply from the Inspector of Schools, to whom he had written two months ago, re the Consolidated School. The meeting decided that the secretary should contact the Inspector again, as now that Lismore needed a a school to replace the one destroyed, it was likely that they would try and obtain a Consolidated School, and if so, they would take the Mt. Bute, Mingay, and perhaps Bradvale area, and so ruin Skipton's chances of having the necessary 200 pupils.
