Metcard - Employee Touchcards

Page last modified/checked: Saturday, 23 February 2002

At last Touchcards have come into more visible and widespread use from July 1st 2000, when they were issued to all employees who are entitled to free travel within the three zone fare system. However, it must be stressed, the Touchcard is NOT a replacement for the actual employees free travel authority. Rather, it is to be used to activate automatic fare gates and placed within 70mm of the yellow target area on validators when the employee travels on metropolitan services. In effect, employees are being used to "live test" Touchcards before they come into public circulation. These cards are approximately 1.5mm thick, and are manufactured in Switzerland, possibly by Landis & Gyr. They were encoded by Sydney based company "Cardserv"; a press release is available here.

Interestingly, the instruction sheet puts the cost of a replacement card at $25.00. Even if an administrative fee is part of this, it still proves that Tochcards are expensive to produce. How this cost might be passed on once they are in public use remains to be seen, but advertising cards seem to provide one possible answer, along the lines of Telephone cards.

Designators MA 1 to MC 4 (inclusive) are known for each of the year 2002 student passes.

We have been able to provide scans of each of the new student passes for 2002. The running numbers have been removed, but as you can see, each are in the 256,000,000 group. The numbering follows directly on from the year 2001 student passes, and this, along with the fact that MA designators have again been used, suggests these current tickets may have been printed late in 2000 or very early in 2001. One additional feature on the current tickets is the wording "remember, always carry your concession card".

The year 2002 student passes are reported to have a polyester based component.

The 2003 student passes are from Magnadata International. The first half yearly and yearly do not have designators. Again, the full number has been removed, but as you can see, they are in the 168,000,000 number group. The wording "remember, always carry your concession card" has been continued from last year.
