

Now be honest. If you're not already shelling out heaps for your very own reserved parking space, isn't the problem of parking itself uppermost in your mind as you trundle off to work in your motor?

Sure, you're doing your trundling on comfy cloth seats. Your feet are wiggling on carpeted floors, and the air conditioning's keeping things pleasant no matter what it's like outside.

Well, those creature comforts are no longer the sole prerogative of the car driver. There are now 54 Comeng 'Supertrains' on the rails in Melbourne with cloth seats, carpet, air conditioning and tinted windows. And they're still rolling off the production line at the rate of one every four weeks. Now Melbourne train travellers can enjoy a little comfort of their own.

At $4 million each the 'Supertrain' is a little more expensive than your average four-wheeler. But they're a darned sight easier to park.
