residents set for show-down

Park Orchards residents are preparing for a bitter fight over the possibility of sub-division of 110 acres of land abutting Domeney Reserve in Knees Road, Park Orchards.

Strong pressures to resist the move are being made on the State Government and Doncaster and Templestowe Council.

The land in question has been zoned "reserved living" under the proposed Melbourne and Metropolitan Board of Works plan for the area and is said to be in the process of being purchased by a well-known building company.

The Park Orchards Rate-payers' Association believes the proposed zoning will lead to a high density develop-ment which will destroy much of the rural aspect of Park Orchards.

The association says it will place a serious burden on schools, kindergartens and community facilities.

Already, more than 400 local residents have signed objections to the plan.

In a signed statement of objections on the proposed rezoning it was pointed out that if Park Orchards is to be surrounded by an area of high-density living there will be inevitable pressure to make Park Orchards an area of high-density living also.

cost of providing some of the required facilities and ser-vices for possible high-den-sity living will be relatively high.

Mr Kevin Smyth, secretary of the ratepayers' association,
told the Diary this week:
"The land in question is broadly representative of the original vegetation of the eastern suburbs of Melbourne.

"It is the second largest semi-natural bush block of its size nearest to Melbourne, and as such, it has a value to and as such, it has a value to Melbourne as a whole as well as to the local community.

"It would be a great tragedy to see the intrusion of close density living into an area like this," said Mr Smyth.

Smyth.

Already officials of the ratepayers' association have inspected the area with Mr V. Houghton, MLC, and Mr N. Lacy, MLA, and ward councillor, Mr I. Marsden.

This move followed an approach by residents to have proach by residents to have the entire site declared a State park.

Mr Houghton has promised to place the matter before State Government.
Doncaster and Templestowe Council has lodged objections with the MMBW and has authorised the three ward councillors to act on behalf of the council in inspections of the area.

CHIEF SECRETARY TOLD:

WARRANDYTE NEEDS EXT

Warrandyte Police Station was manned only about one third of the time, Cr I. Marsden said recently.

He said this was because of shifts, court work, and the disabilities encountered by the shortage of staff.

Cr Marsden was speaking as a member of a six-man Doncaster and Templestowe Council deputation which met the Chief Secretary, Mr Rossiter, on ways of improv-ing police protection and ser-vice within the municipality.

Speaking on the policing of Warrandyte, Cr Marsden said it was a matter for serious concern.

"Staffed as only a two-man "Staffed as only a two-man station, it serves an area of 21 square miles, and covers areas as diverse as Kangaroo Ground, Park Orchards, Warrandyte and South Warrandyte, and parts of Donvale and North Ringwood," said Cr Marsden.

He said the estimated population of these areas was 14,000.

"Because of its popularity as a tourist spot, and with its many secluded areas, War-randyte attracts many young larrikins and louts from neighbouring areas," said Cr Marsden.

Marsden.

"They congregate regularly, especially at weekends, in the many parks and reserves on the river foreshore and in the area which is being reserved as a State park.

"Their drinking, bad language and general misbehaviour has caused many sleepless nights among the residents, particularly the elderly.

"Recent complaints ceived include reports of van-dalism, indiscriminate shootdaish, huserminate snoot-ing, drunken brawls, and the loud revving of motor bike engines in the early hours. There have also been several sex attacks in the area.

"Calls at night, when so "Calls at night, when so many offences occur, have to be policed by the crime car squad at Heidelberg which is ten miles away. When urgency is at a premium, there have been occasions when it has taken in excess of one hour for a car to arrive.

"The two resident polices

"The two resident policemen have little chance of breaking up these gatherings when they are alone, and assistance is so far away. Much of their time is taken up in routine duties — files, warrants, licence tests, motor registrations, and the collection of revenue and its attendant bookwork.

"Thus the important job

"Thus the important job of actually policing the area must of necessity be neglected," said Cr Marsden.

He said the area has been a two-man station for at least the past ten years when the population was but half its

the past ten years when the population was but half its present size.

"With the population growing steadily and further large sub-divisions about to commence, council feels it is imperative that the Warrandyte police station be upgraded, and at least two more men be rostered there for duty," said Cr Marsden.

After hearing the deputation, the Chief Secretary said: "If the number of police and the facilities are not in accord with, and in proportion to the growth of population in Doncaster and Templestowe, the government has a responsibility to ensure the safety of the residents and will do scorathing ensure the safety of the residents and will do something to remedy the situation."

A community emergency service, offering urgent help when needed, has been opened in Warrandyte.

Operated by the Women's Fellowship of St John's Presbyterian Church as part of its "Local Concern" program, the emergency service is especially designed to assist mothers in times of crisis.

Fellowship spokeswoman, Mrs Helen Cox, told the Diary this week that the project is not a baby-sitting service.

The service can be contacted through Mrs Ella Sharpe (844-3720) or Mrs Heather Ingram (844-3447).

The Fellowship has also produced a booklet called "About Warrandyte", especially for newcomers to the district.

"It is crammed full of information about the district," Mrs Cox said, and includes such things as emergency phone numbers, locations of rubbish tips and public phones and even a street directory.

They are Mrs Val Polley, housewife, of Hutchinson Avenue and Mr John Scott, industrial chemist, of Houghton Road.

It is believed that veteran councillor, Mr Viv Rush, will stand again.

Other names have been mentioned and it could turn into a "Melbourne Cup Field". It is believed that at least two others are consider-

Among her local interests, Mrs Polley is secretary of the Warrandyte Environment League.

This election, like recent council contests, is certain to create widespread interest, and it could be close.

With an all-Warrandyte field, the key to the election could be the amount of support that can be rallied for any of these candidates in Park Orchards.

The Golden creek

HARRY HUDSON'S WARRANDYTE

The Warrandyte story begins on May 26, 1851, with an almost obscure paragraph in the Melbourne Daily News

Gold had been discovered at Bathurst, New South

Within a week, Melbourne's whole future was threatened as people left their jobs and deserted the city in a mass. The gold rush was on. Edward Hargreaves, later recognised as the first discoverer of gold in Australia, had unearthed a few specks at Bathurst on February 12 of that year.

With Melbourne almost paralysed by the mass desertion to New South Wales, the Mayor, Alderman William Nicholson, acted fast. He formed a Gold Discovery Committee of leading citizens, offering £200 reward for gold discovered within 100 miles of the Almost immediately after the Committee's announcement, two parties set out to search the area nouncement, two parties set out to search the area around Upper Yarra and the Plenty Ranges.

One party, led by Henry Frencham, a reporter from the Melbourne Times, caused excitement when the Argus, on June 13, 1851, with more enthusiasm than fact, announced gold in the Plenty Ranges. Unfortunately, the assays were negative. In fairness to Frencham, however, the well-known historian, Isaac Selby, in his Pioneers' Memorial History of Melbourne, makes the point that his "find" was made on the exact spot later occupied by the Caledonian Mine at Warrandyte. at Warrandyte.

The second party, led by Louis Michel, proprietor of the Rainbow Hotel, Swanston Street, Melbourne, was more fortunate. With a companion, William Habberlin, Michel made camp at a spot where the main road now crosses Anderson's Creek, on June 29,

Next morning, working their way a short distance up the creek, they saw a rock formation with a vein of quartz running through it. In great excitement they began digging and soon bottomed. Scraping earth into a dish they panned off — one can imagine with what frantic care — and revealed specks of gold. The first gold discovered in Victoria!

How he "struck it rich", is best told in Louis Michel's own words:

In company with Mr Habberlin, I left my hotel about 4 a.m. in order to elude any prospectors who had inclination to follow. We made direct to the Ranges by way of Barkers Road (now Whitehorse Road or Maroondah Highway). After trying the creeks and gullies for several days, our stock of supplies was running low. There being no chance of replenishing them, we were forced to face about for town.

Not knowing exactly our position, we determined to follow some creek down to the Yarra, and in doing so, a particular bend, under a steep bank, led me to think that the creek had not always run on its present course. If gold were to be found it seemed a likely place. Taking a spade and pick, I crossed the creek into the bend. ing a spade and pick, I crossed the creek into the bend. Habberlin, in the meantime lit a fire, and slung the billy. I proceeded to remove the surface for about four square feet, having got into the second spit. I called to Habberlin to bring the dish and gave him strict instructions to wash the earth carefully away until the last few grains were left in the dish.

"Do you see anything, Bill?" said I.

After once or twice saying "No", he suddenly exclaimed, "Your worship, here's the clickety!"

Eagerly examining the residue we found it contained ten small grains of gold.

Michel reported to the Gold Discovery Committee on July 16, who had three chemists make separate tests. Each testified to its being gold. Two days later Michel advertised in the Argus and the Herald for a person interested in exploiting the newly-found gold-field.

On August 6, a Wednesday, Michel and the Commissioner of Crown Lands, M. A. Fenwick, with 40 prospectors, set off for Anderson's Creek. Although the hole dug by Michel was full of water, all were satisfied by tests that the area was auriferous, so the creek was dammed and within the first three hours, despite insufficient equipment, more than 40 pieces of gold — some as large as peas — were found.

By Friday more than 150 miners were at work, over an area of three miles from Jumping Creek to Harris

Gully, with Michel camped a short distance downcreek from the present memorial cairn. The State's first goldfield was called "Victoria", after the newlynamed colony, which became independent of N.S.W. on July 1, 1851.

That same day, a "black-bearded and bewhiskered demon" by the name of Mr Ginger, became Victoria's first goldfield storekeeper.

st goldfield storekeeper.

This woodcutter, whose appearance belied his name,

This woodcutter, most enterprising individual. He was apparently a most enterprising individual. He opened a store, served hot and cold joints with homemade bread at an open-air cafe and erected commo-dious huts for horses. A much surer way of acquiring gold than digging for it.

Ginger had met Michel's party a month earlier. Mistaking them for run-away sailors, he had advised them to make for Brighton where a certain market-

At a meeting that night, it was agreed to allot ten yards of creek to each man as his claim, so that all yards of creek to each man as his claim, so that all yards of creek to each man as his claim, so that all yards of success. first Miner's Rights were thus established at Anderson's Creek.

When Commissioner Fenwick returned to the field on August 14, licences were issued at 30/- each. Although Michel, after consultation with the diggers suggested 10/-, Fenwick was adamant in his demand for 30/-. There was nothing else for it but to pay up or get out.

Rain interfered with work on the field during this period, causing the prospectors to lose heart. weather picture has not changed much, as we who live here know.

So it was not surprising that the flooded goldfield should be all but abandoned before the end of the year. Even the enterprising Mr Ginger cleared off to Mount Alexander. However, two men and three gold com-missioners stayed on, which was fair proof that someone had faith in the field.

In all, 386 miners visited the field between August and December.

The spiritual side was not forgotten during the scramble for gold. The Rev J. H. Gregory and Rev Cheyne held divine services in the tents of Michel and Habberlin. So in many ways Warrandyte got off to a good start.

Although Michel received the reward of £200 and later, in 1854, £1,000 from the Legislative Council, he gleaned very little on the actual goldfield, and had his tent and belongings destroyed by fire.

Louis J. Michel, the father of Warrandyte, was of French descent, his ancestors having migrated to Surrey, England, some time prior to the French Revolution.

In 1839, in company with his uncle, he landed in Melbourne at the age of 14 years, where he began life in the colony as an assistant to a Collins street

He must have lived rather frugally and saved his money, for, on October 21, 1844, he married a Miss Alicia Ball in old St. James' Cathedral, and shortly afterwards became proprietor of the Rainbow Hotel, afterwards became proprietor of the Rainbow Hotel, Swanston Street. Later he took over the Ship Inn, Williamstown — one of Victoria's earliest hotels. Retiring from the hotel business in 1881, he became Rates Collector for the Melbourne City Council. Towards the end of the century Michel was a wealthy property owner in and around Melbourne — a "solid citizen". He lost heavily in the Land Boom during the eighties, but managed to live comfortably at Lygon Street, Carlton, until his death on September 21, 1904.

So passed Louis Michel, the founder of Victoria's

A barbecue with a maximum height of 18 inches can fit in very well if suitable materials are chosen — say, bluestone blocks. If bricks are used, make sure they are the same type and colour as the house (unless the contrast is tasteful).

Don't forget the kids, either. A sweeping lawn can draw the visiting children away from the adult entertainment (hopefully, anyhow) by providing them with somewhere to play and frolic. It can also be a good place for solitary sunbathing.

The pleasant presence of birds can be attracted by the provision of simple birdbaths, trees for their nesting. Banksias, grevillias, correas and other flowering natives attract honey-eaters.

Now, the lights. Attractive, weatherproof lights can be purchased to enable garden living to be extended all through the night (your conscience about the neighbours permitting).

Try for subdued lighting which gives atmosphere, and locate it in such a way that it doesn't shine too harshly into your neighbour's bedroom window.

Finally, give more than a passing thought to the future, when you may be able to locate a swimming pool next to your "outdoor room". This may help save the "hotch potch" effect I wrote about earlier — and the ripping up of attractive trees and shrubs.

from "Old Timer" favouring suburban-like footpaths in Webb Street.

As a regular driver in Webb Street, I agree that there is a problem with narrowness, and people being forced to walk on the road. An inexpensive solution and one not out of character with the area, would be the creation of a narrow gravelled footpath which would meander in and out of the trees between the road and private property.

Also there is a rumor that the intended road improvement to Yarra Street will include a dual carriageway. Let's hope that it's only rumor, as places like Eltham and Diamond Creek have been ruined aesthetically by such divided roadways.

I feel that most newcomers to Warrandyte have decided to live here because of the

Pedestrians in danger

Congratulations to "Old Timer" who complained in the "Diary" about nowhere to walk except on the road in Webb Street.

I have witnessed many close shaves between cars and pedestrians in the narrow road strip between Brackenbury and the cutting in Webb Street.

bury and the cutting in Webb Street.

Twice I have seen elderly people fall in the culverts on the side of the road as they duck for cover to avoid being hit by passing cars.

With so much building and development in Webb Street many drivers, and strangers to the area, think they are travelling on a suburban road. Sunday drivers are another hazard.

I know that being forced to walk on the road is worrying parents of schoolchildren in the area.

Community school?

Warrandyte has a unique community spirit, and School No. 12 is a monument to the efforts of parents over many years. It is appropriate that their attention should now be turned towards the provision of a recondary school in sion of a secondary school in

The most significant recent development in Victoria has been the community schools at Swinburne, Huntingdale and Diamond Creek, and it may be in the interests of our children to have a close look at these schools, which aim to meet the needs of their particular communities.

VFL CLUB OFFERS

Fitzroy Football Club has offered to conduct a football clinic in Warrandyte for local players, following a letter written by Warrandyte club secretary, Mr Brian Harriss to Fitzroy seeking help with the training of players.

It is anticipated that the date and full details of the football clinic will be announced soon.

Despite the lack of success by the seniors, support for the club at social functions has not dwindled.

Club officials have asked the Diary to thank all who helped make the car trial and barbecue so successful.

Mr Harriss is working on the idea of a sportsmen's night at which leading sportsmen will speak. Club officials see this as a valuable moneyraising function, but point out that everyone connected with the club must get behind the idea if it is to get off the ground.

Other junior clubs have found these nights successful

Mr Eric Houghton, pro-prietor of the Coffee Bean Restaurant, has offered his premises free to the club for an evening for under-15 and under-17 players.

Manager of the under-17 side, Mr J. McCartin (844-2057) is keen to hear from parents who would like to assist in providing a night out for the boys.

Seniors' coach, Robert White, is trying everything he can to lift the form of the seniors. He is concentrating on a play-on, handball style of football.

In the

In the recent match against Norwood, the seniors were 11 points down at half-time, but could not go on with the job.

Vin Thornton turned in one of his best games for the season and Brian Tomlinson showed the benefit of his ex-perience by handling the greasy conditions well.

Edwards and Lawrence worked hard in defence, but their good work was let down by players further up the field.

The seconds went down in a dull game. Peter Ness was in fine form all day.

The under-17 side disappointed after their fine showing against top side North Ringwood the previous week. Numbers have risen in the under-17 ranks and selectors have more than the usual 18 or so players to choose from.

SCHEME NEEDS HELP

Extra emergency drivers and more assistance is required to help the meals-on-wheels program.
Winter is proving a busy time for the organisers, Warrandyte and District Welfare Services Service.

Meals-on-wheels are now provided five days a week

Any person interested in helping should contact Mrs M. McLaughlin (844-3746) or Mrs J. Cole (844-3431).
