There has been lot of talk about the proposed realignment of Yarra Street.

That the Loder and Bayly Report seriously suggests the demolition or removal of the old Post Office has also promoted widespread community

The Diary believes that a lot of work is needed along Yarra Street to make it a safer and more pleasant place to shop and relax.

The Post Office Preservation Group, the Warrandyte Environment League and the Warrandyte randyte Environment Lea-gue and the Warrandyte Advisory Committee have all publicly said that park-ing needs to be improved and that Yarra Street should be made safer.

They are equally united in their opinion that the old Post Office should not be moved, but should be restored and the building used again.

The Post Office Preservation Group recently circulated a petition to show council the extent of Conservationists have applauded the Victorian Government's decision to preserve 154 hectares of natural bushland bordering 9 k.m. of the Yarra River at Warrandyte.

The Minister for Conservation, Mr. Vasey Houghton and the Minister for the Arts and Member for Warrandyte, Mr. Norman Lacy, recently announced that notices had been served on the owners of the Yarra Brae and Stane Brae properties, between Warrandyte and Wonga Park.

The proposed work includes picnic and barbeque areas, car parks, toilets and an overnight camping area for canoeists and bushwalkers.

Horse riding is being considered for some tracks and scouting activities will be maintained at Clifford Park.

Commenting on the scheme, Mr. Houghton said: "The government has

"Visitors to the park already number in the vicinity of 300,000 each year and this has been increasing constantly."

Artist and conservationist Mr. Neil Douglas, who has lived near the Bend of Isles for many years, has described the area as the "last patch of natural river frontage, a veritable natural Australian botanic garden, within the Melbourne area and one in which you could almost believe that Captain Cook had never arrived".

Smokey remembers the $1,000 that Apex donated for the purchase of the Warrandyte fire truck. Wonder if the vandals will remember next time they have a fire!

Not long ago the drone of a particularly noisy fan-driven 'swamp boat' once again startled the residents living along the

Anyway, your smoke-stained war correspondent was there on your behalf, complete with crackers and kids.

And the boys from the service clubs were there too, and the fire brigades, and the state emergency service; and everyone else for miles around.

No amateur fire-work-ing allowed. All crackers had to be handed in, to be let off by the trusted, specially-trained officials on the truck.

All went well. Until one errant catherine wheel broke loose from its mooring and went skittering across the truck, into an open rubbish bin — full of fireworks!

The fully trained safety cracker-letter-offers watched, fascinated. Then they jumped. In all directions.

Then the fireworks started jumping. In all directions. Sky rockets zooming low, through the kids; catherine wheels arching off into the darkness; golden rain falling over all.

Eltham Shire Council has voted to maintain the status quo on infant welfare centre funding until January 1 next year.

This effectively maintains the staffing level of six infant welfare sisters and 49 sessions per week for another three months.

The matter was then referred by council back to the community services

the community committee. services

Chairman of the North Warrandyte Infant Welfare Committee, Mr. Greg Thorpe, told the Diary that Thorpe, fold the Diary that councillor Robert Marshall sponsored a resolution at the November council meetings that 1980-81 levels be maintained until at least September 30, 1982.

"However, the means of financing this level of funding have yet to be finalised," said Mr. Thorpe.

"The final number of sessions per week has to be clarified at the next council meeting, early in December," he said.

"It is apparent that the financing will have to be considered earlier than the mid-year Council budget review," Mr. Thorpe said.

"It would appear that the North Warrandyte centre is safe for the present and that there is hope for its continued good service in 1982."

Fairy Nuff wins by a whisker

'Twas the stuff that dreams are made of . . . with a magical swish of the wand, Bob (Pumpkin) Karl was transformed into a glittering fairy and stunned the crowd at Warrandyte Arts Association 25th Silver Jubilee Ball.

Fairy Nuff won the judges' fancy dress award by a short half wing tip and was presented with the WAA Jubilee Prize.

"I now present you with this K-Tel house brick" said Master of Ceremonies, Martin Walker. "It has thousands of uses around the home or castle."

Nuff fluttered her wings and eyelashes as best she could and noted that she'd never laid one of those before. Nuff's other fairy friends at table one then moved the audience with a drooping rendition of "It's no fun to be a fairy over forty".

Meanwhile at table ten, the second place winners were beaming down onto the stage to receive their prize of a bottle of earthling champagne.

These alien silver space-folk were led by David (Bucked Rogers) Crockett from Apex Galaxy One. With Queen Cheryl (and crew) 'Bucked' was on a fact-finding mission to evaluate the present status of the intergalactically famous Warrandyte Arts Association Arts Association.

Along with the seven silver Father Christmas' the two Long John Silvers and the table of Silver Brims, 'Bucked' agreed that the WAA is alive and well.

Elderly citizens the swing

It was a pleasure to attend the annual concert for the Elderly Citizens on Wednesday, November 11.

Although the sudden death of the former president, Mr. Bob Watson must have been foremost in all their minds, their concert was a great experience. Like true troopers, they kept up a variety of performances.

The Warrandyte Waterbabies were really in the swim of things, and Sadie the Cleaning Lady did wonderful things with her feather duster.

The performances were too numerous to mention, but they were all appreciated by the full house that attended, as was the lovely supper that followed.

Congratulations to the Elderly Citizens for another great success, and may they have many more.

The meeting was addressed by the Rev. Jeff Berger, past chairman of the Knox managing committee of CYSS.

He said a community project like the Warrandyte co-operative must involve young people themselves.

involve young people themselves.

"If we develop the suggestions outlined by Lou Hill together with young people, this scheme will have a lot to offer the Warrandyte community," Rev. Berger said.

Mr. Hill, who chaired the meeting, described a number of areas with job creation potential.

"We will develop the carpentry shop and market garden," he said.
"We will also investigate the possibility of starting a car wash, a community bus and a firewood distribution business.
"The Co-operative will create socially useful jobs that will benefit the entire local community.

"How did they start?"

"Spontaneous combustion, mostly. Blokes spontaneously knockin' out their pipes on the woodheap; that sort of thing.

"We had one publican here who kept pigs. Fed'em on the slops from the bar. Those pigs were rotten drunk all the time. Happiest pigs in Australia—and the fattest.

"Pig sty went up one Christmas. You could hear the squealin' in Eltham. Great Christmas dinner at the pub that year. Extra good cracklin'.

"I've had some real good Christmas dinners in me time. Turkey farm went up another year.

"They was hard times too, o' course. Blokes'd eat anythin'.

"Anyway, he called in the pub to buy his Christmas grog and we got him outside a few. Finished up invitin' a couple of us back for dinner.

"Havin' a real Orstralian Christmas dinner,' he announces. 'Local game. Always try to live orf the country, don'cher know.' We had no idea what he was dishin' up.

"'Probably swan, or a couple of wild ducks,' someone suggested.

"Anyway, we goes back to his joint and has a few more grogs. Then his missus brings out the main course.

"It was a whole animal."

"It was a whole animal, roasted, lyin' on its stomach on a big silver meat dish. Looked pretty fat. I couldn't place it. At first I thought it was wild pig, but the snout was wrong. Flatter.

"Then mine host — this pommy painter bloke — sharpened up his knife and plunged it in. And the hot oil shot everywhere."

"That's right. Eucalyptus oil. It was a whole koala bear. Dinkum. Stuffed."
"Did you eat it?"
"No, not me. Couldn't come at it. I filled up on pertaters and puddin' and mince pies.
"But one of the blokes did. O' course he had a bad cold, so he wouldn't have tasted much. Said the eucalyptus did him the world of good."

market, to market

The Warrandyte Community Market has now been functioning successfully since February, 1980.

Our current permit from the City of Doncaster and Templestowe is valid until May, 1982 and we foresee no difficulty in obtaining an extension provided the market regulations are omplied with in the mean-

We are happy to report that during the last year the market committee has donated $100 to each of the following local community groups:

Warrandyte, North Warrandyte and South Warrandyte Fire Brigades; Elderly Citizens' Club; Warrandyte Environment League; Warrandyte Historical Society; Post Office Restoration Fund; Warrandyte Retarded Children's Auxiliary. Auxiliary.

If anyone would care to nominate any other local group who would like to benefit from a donation, the committee would be happy to consider sug-gestions.

The stall fees are deposited monthly into the Community Warrandyte Market account at the State Bank in Warrandyte.

The newly formed committee, which has generously offered to help with the running of the market, is Priscilla Troedel, Sue Boyle, Trish Hely, Dianne Phillips and Judy Trenberth.

Any enquiries regarding the market can be made to Judy (844 2161) or Trish (844 2374).

The Market Committee and stallholders would like to express their very great appreciation to Janet Gilberthorpe, one of the originators, who is leaving Warrandyte in December.

Janet has devoted many hours to ensuring the success of the market.

Talking to Jess Lapthorne, who now lives at Balnarring with daughter Betty, we learned that son Peter has taken up residence at 'Veterans' RSL home in Frankston.

Big surprise was meeting our mate Bert Watson who was admitted on same day. Bert is still fighting fit and goes into Frankston township every day.

No need to wonder why?

To council, with love

To dear council members there are new shops being put up in Warrandyte and I think it will spoil Warrandyte because we already have got enough trouble trying to restore its old buildings and things and if you want my opinion I think they should make it into a tiny museum (I mean the new shops) for pieces of gold and different old valuable things otherwise Warrandyte will soon be turned into a city with thumping factories and busy highways.

NEW SHOPS LOOK GOOD

The block of new shops in Warrandyte have been dubbed the Bridge Arcade. And they are looking good.

There has been a great deal of informal discussion around town about the style and setting of these new additions to Warrandyte.

The builders, Ritter Davis Pty. Ltd., believe they have completed the shops in such a manner that they are both practical and environ-mentally attractive.

Certainly the extensive use of natural timber and the curved iron awnings have allowed the buliding to fit in with the historical character of Warrandyte dyte

Petcare

In this article I would like to talk about a rapdily expanding problem in the outer suburban areas of Melbourne, the care and feeding of the backyard pony which is usually only ridden on weekends and school holidays.

Most horses kept around the Warrandyte area do not have nearly enough grass to eat, especially during the dry summer months, and must be fed hay or other supplements every day.

When the pasture grass is brown and dry the pony can get very little nutritive value from it and in these situations it is necessary to give him some concentrates in the form of grain, protein meal, mash or a complete horse

Even more common, it seems, is the horse completely surrounded by bare earth and a few gnawed trees, and in these situations it is necessary to feed necessary to feed roughage in the form of hay, chaff or straw as well as high energy concentrates.

I am very worried by some young horse owners who insist on only giving their horse a small amount of feed during the amount of feed during the week when they do not have time to ride him, and then providing a huge meal on weekends to compensate for the increased exercise.

This is not only very bad from a nutritional point of view but can also be very dangerous, as also be very dangerous, as any large quantity of grain fed to a hungry horse can cause digestive upsets such as colic or foot problems such as founder.

The responsible owner of a weekend pony should also ensure that there is always sufficient clean water available at all water times.

During a hot summer's day a horse may drink over 60 litres (13 gallons) and if he runs out of Twice daily feeding and watering is essential if you are to properly care for your horse.

Unless you can guarantee to do this every day you should not keep him in a yard or on someone's vacant block of land but agist him where there is sufficient pasture all year round and where someone is present every day to keep an eye on him.

Feeding underworked horses is not an easy job and if you are having problems it is best to discuss it with someone who has had experience in this sort of thing.

Under-feeding can lead to loss of condition and energy but over-feeding can cause a pony to become frisky and hard to handle.

There are many books and pamphlets on this subject but the best method is daily observation of his condition and the pasture available and to adjust his supplementary feed accordingly.

Regular attention to hooves and teeth and routine drenching for worms are all necessary and should be carried out by an experienced farrier or vet.

With summer approaching now is the time to enjoy your horse, but when winter comes again him — n't forget don't forget his because he won't VOU.

Too many horses and not enough horse sense

Aren't young animals beautiful! The large number of fluffy-tailed foals in our area at the moment is a joy to any animal lover's heart. Unfortunately foals and puppies, however lovely when young, grow into horses and dogs, often much less appealing!

In the press from time to time, there has been shown a growing concern at the cat and dog population explosion in the suburbs. There have been calls by concerned bodies for the compulsory neutering of all animals not registered for breeding and for limits to be put on registered breeders to restrict their numbers of litters. The small animal explosion is difficult to control as frequently cats and dogs roam the streets and breed indiscriminately. The sad thing at the end of all this is the number of unwanted animals who are finally destroyed.

Are we horse owners any finally destroyed.

Are we horse owners any the less to blame? Perhaps we are more to blame in that the breeding of a foal takes place, of necessity, at the whim or decision of the owner of a mare. There is at the moment, a glut on the horse market — not of quality animals certainly, but a glut of plain-looking, cross-bred horses, badly broken-in and quite useless for anyone who wants to enjoy their horse and their riding.

So many people have told me that they have bought a mare for their children to ride so that when it is too old for pony club, or is outgrown, they can breed a foal from her, as if this was an end in itself! I would like to suggest to these day-dreamers that they pay a visit to the local sales and just have a look at the results of this type of thinking!

Before the next breeding season, I would like to offer some advice to mare owners and prospective breeders. Keeping in mind that the present glut of horses is likely to last for a few years yet, consider the cost. You will have to pay a stud fee for the service of a stallion with perhaps additional agistment costs if the mare is left at the stud farm. For the next eleven months the mare will have to be fed adequately for her to rear a healthy foal.

When the foal is born, you may or may not, have a veterinary bill to pay—and, from the voice of experience, if you can raise a foal from birth to two years old without a collection of vet. bills then I suggest that you are some sort of magician! After the foal is born, your mare is still going to require extra feed so that she can adequately feed the foal—grass alone is not enough unless you have several acres of very high quality pasture. A small paddock of native grass in this area is not at all suitable. The foal on weaning can be sold as a weanling, but unless it is a very good example of one of the pure breeds, then you will not even cover your costs to the present time.

You can retain the foal, wait until it is two years old and break it in yourself — certainly not recommended unless you have had vast experience with horses, and have the proper horse-breaking equipment and the proper facilities for horse-breaking. You can have someone break-in the horse for you at a cost of about sixty dollars a week for six weeks or so — $360 — if my calculations are correct!

THEY SHOOT THEM DON'T THEY?

Lorraine McLean gives some good advice about horse breeding in Warrandyte.

My suggestions following this are these — unless you have a really outstanding mare with a very good nature don't even consider breeding from her. If you think that having a foal will quieten a difficult mare down — I can assure you that in the majority of cases this does not work and you are more likely to end up with two scatty horses instead of one!

Having decided to breed a foal from your attractive-looking, quiet and reasonably young mare, again don't settle on the 'mandown-the-road's colt' as the prospective sire. If it is worth the time and the money and the effort to breed a foal, try to breed the best that you can afford. This will ensure that you produce a good foal which will be assured of a good home even if you decide not to keep it yourself. It will be worth more money and you can rest in the knowledge that you have done your best to contribute an animal of worth to the horse world. It will also, hopefully, escape the horrors of the saleyards and the trip to the knackery.

Finally, do breed with a purpose in mind, rather than the vague and dreamy notion that it would be nice to have a foal in the family. Have some idea of what the foal might ultimately be useful for —showing in breed classes, a quality and versatile pony club horse or pony, a show-jumper or harness pony, etc., and select a stallion to complement the qualities that your mare already has, to attain what you want.

I wonder what will be the fate of our fluffy-tailed little foals that are cavorting around the Warrandyte paddocks today!

STUMPED IN A SPINOUT!

District Cricket Association top four with a great day in the field against Ringwood.

The Dytes had slipped from second to fifth spot on the ladder with a narrow defeat by South Wantirna in their previous match.

But, thanks to "spin twins" Bob McDonald and Stan Davis — and the reflexes of wicketkeeper Stan Davis — and the reflexes of wicketkeeper Bruce Kline — they are well-placed to force a win over East Ringwood.
