Dual occupancy dictators ignore democracy

Doncaster and Templestowe Council took the initiative late last year and advised residents throughout the municipality of the Government's proposed "Residential Development Provisions for Victoria". Copies of the council brochure are available at the Warrandyte newsagency and from the council offices in Doncaster.

The Concerned Residents of Warrandyte Group, formed last year to oppose dual occupancy in the township area, has made a submission opposing these new proposals. They are worried by provisions which allow triple occupancy; three dewellings per 1000 square metres (approximately a quarter

Like the dual occupancy provisions, these new proposals will be imposed by State Government and local councils will be powerless to oppose them.

Housing of such density in War-randyte township would be totally inappropriate on many grounds: historic, environmental and aesthetic, apart from fire safety risks and pressure on local services. Lo-cals who fondly believe it can never happen here should look at new estates around us, where houses are estates around us, where nouses are being built so close together there is barely room to walk between them. Submissions on this issue closed on November 6 last year, but you can still take council's advice and write to local members of parlia-ment with your opinion. This is the last change residents on both sides last chance residents on both sides of the river will have to let their feelings be known to government.

The plan covers proposals for the development of land in residential areas where densities are higher than 4000 metres (approximately one acre) and re-zoning of reserved living to equivalent of residential 'C' (785 square metres at present), with block sizes down to 300 square metres.

In the light of our experience with the dual occupancy issue, only an overwhelming effort on the part of each member of the community will have any effect.

Dual occupancy is still unresolved, despite the results of a survey conducted by Doncaster and Templestowe Council in which 86.1 per cent of residents opposed dual occupancy, and the response by the Treasurer, Mr Jolley, on behalf of the then Minister for Planning and the Environment, assuring us that the Government would consider an exemption on environmental grounds, after receiving a submission from council. (Diary, April 1987.)

I have been informed that we will

I have been informed that we will get dual occupancy anyway, "because it's government policy and because people in the area want it". However, I am still naive to believe in democracy, and if the people in the area are determined enough, we can still prevent Warrandyte be-coming a residential ghetto.

Doncaster and Templestowe Council, having taken the initiative on this issue, deserve our support. Failure to give such support will be seen as proof that we are not interested.

Ranger swap angers

By DAVID WYMAN

Warrandyte conservation groups are angry at the sudden transfer of Ken Gurney, the popular ranger-incharge of Warrandyte State Park. After about 2½ years in the job, Ken was transferred sideways on January 1 to be a Fisheries and Wildlife technical officer.

Local environmentalists are particularly upset because the transfer happened quickly in the festive period. They, and others, are concerned that Ken Gurney has left the job in the midst of preparation of the management plan for the Warrandyte State Park.

They have protested about the randyte State Park.

They have protested about the transfer to senior officers of the Department of Conservation, Forests and Lands, and to the Minister, Joan Kirner. These appear to have brought an assurance that Ken will be used from time to time in the planning phase of the park until the draft management plan is completed.

ed. But Warrandyte people want him

At least two meetings of representatives of local groups were held before Christmas and letters of protest to the minister and verbal protests to the department have produced negative answers.

The official reason for Ken's transfer appears to be that it is a natural progression in his career path and that his "positive attributes" will be fully made use of in his new role of protecting commercial and recreational fisheries and reducing the illegal trafficking in native wildlife. But locals believe that there have been continuing differences between Ken and some of his superiors.

Glen Jameson, co-ordinator of the Friends of Warrandyte State Park, says he was shocked when told that Ken was being taken out of the park. Glen has a close relationship with all the park rangers and asks: "What has he done?"

"This sort of thing just doesn't happen, particularly when he is so well liked and is in the middle of the management plan. He is one of the most resourceful people I have known. When he applied for the job he was thought to be perfect for it. He still is."

"He grew up in the area and has always been involved with the land. The practical things he and his team have done have put the park on the right pathway. He inspired his staff and handled them well, as far as I'm concerned."

Glen Jameson's concern is shared by others: the Warrandyte Environment League, local committees, clubs, scouts, guides and others, numbering 19, who signed a letter of protest to Joan Kirner.

They said that Ken Gurney "is held in the highest regard by the Warrandyte community and has shown rare empathy for our environment and the people who live here." They appealed to the minister to look into the circumstances of his transfer and "try to see that it is in the interests of the park and people of Warrandyte that his great ability should be retained here."

Acting Minister Neil Trezise replied that he was confident that this change was in the best interests of conservation and the wider community.

We must keep reserves for our other customers.' Fine, said the lady. 'Could I have six stamps please?' 'Yes,' he said, and handed over a half a dozen. 'Thank you,' she replied, and turned to her sister. 'Would you buy me five stamps,' she asked, and handed over the cash to her companion. The sister obliged, and bought the stamps without any problems. The proprietor actually handed the stamps to our informant, even though her sister.

Why is it that so many of Warrandyte's sports men and women are accident-prone? Smokey ran up a mental tally for the past 20 years and was astonished at the number. The latest are brothers Michael and Cameron Day, both cricketers and footballers of note. Older brother Michael suffered serious injuries in a car crash, which may still prevent him from lining up for the Dytes, and Cameron came off his motorcycle after hitting a patch of gravel. Both are well on the mend, thankfully. Both are thankfully.

And on the morbid subject of injury, Smokey hopes that 1988 is kinder to Greg Thorpe, who spent a couple of weeks at the end of 1987 in Maroondah Hospital. He fell about three metres from a pergola, breaking a leg and an ankle. Still, life has its little consolations. Wife Kay is due to give birth to triplets this month, brother and/or sisters to first-born Keiran and twins Melinda and Bronwyn.

Smokey fancies himself as a bit of a mathematician — 10 toes, 10 fingers and sundry other bits and pieces add up to ... well, quite a lot — and has come up with the following: Based on one single child and two sets of twins, the Thorpes can expect three sets of triplets, if they're game.

Overheard in the rubbiddy: "Yeah, me and the missus have been to hear some of that classical stuff. I took her to Elton John and the ourne Sympathy Orchestra. ***

Absent from Warrandyte over the Australia Day weekend were Anne and Ian Hookey and Trish and Bob Millington. Joining them in Gumly Gumly, via Wagga Wagga, were Maureen (sister of Anne and Trish) and Egon Fink from Croydon and Jane (Anne's daughter) and Wayne Roe from Watsonia. Also there were Bronwyn Hookey and Sean Dealy and the lovely Pauline. Unfortunately unable to make the trip were Mary (matriarch of the family) Huxtable and husband Jack.

And what was so special about Wagga? Well, up there in Gumly Gumly had gathered the Argus clan, descendants of Mary Huxtable's progenitors. They are a scattered crowd. A busload came from the Kalgoorlie area; others drifted in from Toowoomba. A measure of the success of the gathering was the 27 empty beer kegs eventually lined up along the wall of the East Wagga Australian Football Club.

One of this town's eligible bache One of this town's eligible bachelors, whom we won't name in fairness to the young ladies he squires about, thought he'd hit upon the answer to his most lascivious dreams. He put in a spa bath with a glass roof, so that the romantic meal and music could be followed by a quick dip, whereupon the lady of the moment would look up and see the moon and stars and feel even more romantic. Alas and alack, our young man's expensive plans have come to nought. The glass roof fogs up, doesn't it.

How long will it take before Don-caster and Templestowe Council causes the death of a motorcyclist by failing to put up signs indicating that roadwork is in progress. Twice in recent weeks a motorcycling mate of Smokey's has come around a blind corner only to find water and gravel all over the road. Once on the Warrandyte-Templestowe on the Warrandyte-Templestowe Road and once on Thompsons Road. On both occasions gravel was being laid on the side of the road and being watered. Fortunately Smokey's mate is a cautious rider; nevertheless extremely sharp braking was required to avoid a fall. Smokey wonders what the council's legal liability would be if an accident had occurred.

After years of building their yacht Seaweed IV, and waiting for the family to grow up, the Reids of Warrandyte are off on their long-planned trip. The first stage was a leisurely cruise to Hobart to meet up with the Tall Ships and race them to Sydney. They leave Sydney this month to sail up through the Barrier Reef to Darwin. In mid-August there's the Darwin-to-Ambon race to think about. And after that, who knows?

Becoming a daily commuter on our now expanded Warrandyte to Melbourne bus service at the least provides interesting opportunities to observe human nature and increase survival skills.

It helps to have a mate who can alert you to the little nuances that make such travel easier, such as knowledge that, in the morning, the freeway buses don't go down Lygon Street and a change is required in Johnston Street, which becomes Elgin Street, and that any bus with an 'O' in the middle will take you up to Carlton, but of course that doesn't apply going home.

This information is available on most bus stops, for those fortunates who can decypher bus timetables and bearing in mind that they are all out of date, so the 5.20 probably now comes at 5.15 and the 7.05 at 7.15.

The golden rule is very simple: the buses are reliably unreliable. They aren't bad in the morning but the evening, well, just wait around a bit. One will come eventually. The drivers are an interesting mix. On my first trip I handed over $10 to be advised that bus drivers are not bank tellers and smaller change is essential for the first on the bus. The till peters out about $6 early in the day.

But back to the drivers. Some obviously moonlight on the Scenic Railway on days off. These drivers practise, it seems, on the West Warrandyte hills after a warm-up run through Templestowe leading up to the "big one". If I lived on the lower side of Warrandyte Road at that end of town I would have a reinforced flat roof with landing lights.

However, let me tell you about the jovial and kind driver, obviously Irish, who not only helped an elderly blind gentleman off the bus at Cemetery Road but stopped the traffic and made sure he was across the road safely. We could wish such public relations gestures were stressed at driver training. Being a bus commuter requires a thick skin.

The most interesting experience to date, however, would have to concern the gentleman who gets on sometimes at the Cemetery Road stop in the mornings. There he was with his long grey hair and beard and computer manuals and a small plastic bag with a little box in it, being carried carefully. Around High Street, one day, he opened it and revealed half a dozen tiny baby birds squawking for food. He gently fed them with tweezers, carefully selecting morsels from a glass container.

A fascinating sight, equalled in interest by the reactions from those sitting around him in their suits and leather coats, coiffured hair and manicured nails. It wasn't happening for them. They stared into space and ignored the entire engaging event. They missed out, but I've never been more proud to be a Warrandytean.

I'm still not sure about being a bus commuter, but as the bus zooms up the bus lane on the freeway and we look down on the "snails" crawling to their destinations, it proves it does have some appeal.

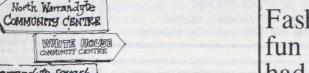

But what about a bus or two on Sundays?

Another link with Warrandyte's past was broken with the death of Sylvia Hussey on December 10. She was 88. The funeral at St. Stephen's Anglican Church was attended by many members of Sylvia's family and her friends, who were grateful to Father Russell Joyce for the very fine service he conducted.

Joyce for the very fine service he conducted.

Sylvia May Walden was born at Canterbury on May 18, 1899, the youngest of the four children of Charles and Elizabeth Walden. Her life spanned an incredible era, from the time of horse-drawn vehicles to man stemping on the moon.

Charles and Elizabeth Walden. Her tife spanned an incredible era, from the time of horse-drawn vehicles to man stepping on the moon.

The Walden family moved to Braden Brae at South Warrandyte in 1910, settling into a house which had been brought from Ballarat by a 32-horse team. The children attended the South Warrandyte School, cutting through the paddocks along what is now Colman Road. Sylvia left school at the end of the 8th grade, as was usual in those days, and stayed home to help with the work. Braden Brae was operating as a guest house with as many as 40 visitors at one time.

Sylvia did all the housework while her mother cooked. Clarice (the late Mrs Dwight), another daughter, looked after the outside jobs. The coach service ran to Ringwood twice daily at 7.30 am and 6.30 pm. Outside of those hours it was a four-mile walk to Ringwood if the family wanted to go anywhere.

From the age of 16 until she married, Sylvia took singing lessons. Dame Nellie Melba, who used to visit Braden Brae, gave her an audition and urged her to study full time at the Melbourne Conservatorium of Music. However the lack of money and the need to help the family made this impossible. But Sylvia continued to sing at concerts in Melbourne.

For the stay of the family was at these dances that Sylvia met her future husband, Bill Hussey, who took over the Warrandyte-Ringwood coach run in 1916. While Bill courted Sylvia, the coach ran via Braden Brae unless the inspector was on board.

Sylvia and Bill married at the Church of England in Ringwood on August 17, 1921. The bridal party left for the reception at Braden Brae in a hansom cab followed by the guests in the four-horse drag (a 25-passenger coach) which was normally used on the Warrandyte run to handle the weekend crowds.

Bill and Sylvia moved into the home they had bought in Yarra Street (73, 75 and 79, then on one title). The property had big stables and room to operate the coaches.

Bill and Sylvia had five daughters between 1923 and 1931 (Hazel, Joan, Betty, Phyllis and Wilma). Sylvia did all the family washing in a wood-fired copper which stood out in the open, getting up at 4 am in the summer to avoid the heat of the day. The ironing was done with a box iron filled with coals. When in the summer to avoid the heat of the day. The ironing was done with a box iron filled with coals. When the water tanks were low, as often happened during the dry summers, sylvia carried the water up from the river in buckets.

Apart from running the household and looking after a young family, Sylvia always had the stables cleaned out and ready for the horses when the coach got back from Ringwood. She also took the horses up to the blacksmith to be shod.

horses up to the blacksmith to be shod.

Bill and Sylvia struck hard times when they lost the mail contract. They replaced the coach with a bus but had to put it off the road when passengers disappeared during the depression. Bill was out of work for nearly four years. During this time none of the family had any new clothes. Sylvia, like so many other mothers, skimped on her own food so that the children got enough to eat. And if the depression wasn't bad enough, December 1, 1934, saw the Yarra Valley's greatest flood.

Sylvia was at home watching the water creeping up to the verandah and start to surround the house. She was not reassured by the rumors was not reassured by the rumors that the Maroondah Dam was about to give way, not so far fetched as it turned out, as the top of the wall was being battered by

Compiled by PAT ANDERSON

This month the Diary publishes its annual list of activities available to local residents. Where activities are not offered in Warrandyte, the nearest locations are listed; for example, Donvale or Eltham.

The list includes private tuition, sports clubs and learning centres. Information available from learning centre varies in time span. The programs for the Donvale and Templestowe art centres apply to first term only, whilst those for Eltham, Panton Hill, North Ringwood and Park Orchards

The cost of courses is not included. This varies between centres according to their emphasis and philosophy. Eltham and Panton Hill, for example, operate with volunteer tutors, enabling minimal charges.

Most centres offer good quality child care in association with classes. Community child care centres are also listed below.

Enrolments for many courses take place in February. If you have missed the enrol-

fire flood and famine

Sylvia hussey and her favorite mode of transport.

huge trees which had been swept down by the flood.

Sylvia and Bill became members of the Presbyterian Church in War-randyte in 1923 and they supported it through some very troubled times, including the depression, the 1934 flood, and the 1939 fire that burnt down Warrandyte's three churches. The first Presbyterian Church service after the fires was held under the huge old oak tree, which still stands on the Hussey property, on February 24, 1939, and services were held in a marquee under the tree for the next six months.

Sylvia went through a very traumatic time during the 1939 fires. She was in Ringwood with Phyllis when the fires started and couldn't get home. Joan was at Croydon doing the family shopping, Hazel was working in town, Betty and Wilma were at a neighbor's place and Bill was working at Rubicon. Sylvia finally reached Warrandyte to find her own home and family safe, although four of her immediate family had lost everything.

In 1951, Bill and Sylvia moved to their new home at 77 Yarra Street, which was part of the original block that they bought in 1921.

Their house survived the 1962 fires, due to Bill's efforts. When the fire jumped the river behind their property Bill and Sylvia were home on their own. Their neighbors on either side were absent. Bill, then aged 75 and a foundation member of the Warrandyte Fire Brigade, dealt with the fires on his own place and those on either side before help arrived, at one stage turning the hose on himself to save being overcome by smoke.

Sylvia was much more concerned with a ringtail possum that had been singed than the fire which was heading towards the house. The possum, realising that it was on a good thing took up residence in the oak tree, a tree that has stood unscathed through more than 100 years of flood, fire and storm.

Sylvia was one of a small number of women who attended the inaugural meeting of the Royal Women's Hospital Warrandyte Auxiliary, which was formed by Dr Ethel Osorne in 1930. Although Sylvia has always refused to hold office, she never ceased to work for the organisation. She was made a life governor of the hospital in 1946 and was awarded the 50-year service medal in 1980.

in 1980. Until an illness in 1983 she used to ride up the street on her push bike and was well known as the little old white-haired lady who rode the bike, a title she wasn't too keen on when she learnt of it. She didn't consider herself old.

Sylvia's house was robbed when she was in her 80s. She came in from outside, locking the door behind her one evening, unaware that there was anyone inside until she heard the floorboards creak. She met the teenage intruder in the passage. With great presence of mind she talked the thief to the back door, opened it and pushed him outside, then locked the door again. Among her other qualities, Sylvia proved to be an excellent mother-in-law, and earned the affection and respect of her sons-in-law, a relationship that in one case stood the test, not only as in-laws, but as near neighbors for 35 years.

Sylvia faced many trials through ter long and eventful life. She lived through two world wars, brought up a family through the greatest depression this country has known as well as enduring floods and devastating bush fires. She faced these trials and overcame them with a steadfast faith and determination that never left her. She died among her family in Warrandyte, where she had lived all her married life.

Sylvia left a family of four daughters (Phyllis died before her), 13 grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren.

Programs for the young

The Uniting Church Children and Youth programs commence again in February. In the past year these catered for well over 100 young people on a regular basis.

Sunday School, for kinder age up, is this year being led by Jennifer Curwood (844 3830) and meets at 9 am each Sunday morning, Junior Youth Club, for children in Years 5 to 7 at school, is led by Leanne Kearn (844 2038) and a senior group for Years 8 upwards will this year be led by the Hanson family (844 3906).

Good News activities, which operated very successfully for its first year last year, will continue. Contact Stan Fishley (844 3476).

From the age of 16 until she married, Sylvia took singing lessons. Dame Nellie Melba, who used sons, Dame Nellie Melba, who used to visit Braden Brae, gave her an audition and urged her to study full time at the Melbourne Conservatorium of Music. Bill and sylvia had five daughters between 1923 and 1931 (Hazel, Joan, Betty, Phyllis and Wilma). Sylvia did all the family washing in a wood-fired copper which stood out in the open, getting up at 4 am in the summer to avoid the heat of the day. The ironing was done with the day. The ironing was done with a box iron filled with coals. When the water tanks were low, as often happened during the dry summers. Sylvia carried the water up from the

Bill and Sylvia struck hard times when they lost the mail contract. They replaced the coach with a bus but had to put it off the road when passengers disappeared during the depression. Bill was out of work for depression. Bill was out of work for nearly four years. During this time none of the family had any new clothes. Sylvia, like so many other mothers, skimped on her own food so that the children got enough to eat. And if the depression wasn't bad enough, December 1, 1934, saw the Yarra Valley's greatest flood.

Sylvia was at home watching the water creeping up to the verandah and start to surround the house. She

Sylvia and Bill became members of the Presopterian Church in War-randyte in 1923 and they supported it through some very troubled times, including the depression, the 1934 flood, and the 1939 fire that 1934 flood, and the 1939 fire that burnt down Warrandyte's three churches. The first Presbyterian Church service after the fires was held under the huge old oak tree, which still stands on the Hussey property, on February 24, 1939, and services were held in a marquee under the tree for the next six months.

Sylvia went through a very traumatic time during the 1939 fires. See was in Ringwood with Phyllis when the fires started and couldn't get home. Joan was at Croydon doing the family shopping, Hazel was working in town, Betty, and Wilma were at a neighbor's place and Bill was working at Rubicon. Sylvia finally reached Warrandyte to find her own home and family safe, although four of her immediate family had lost everything.

diate family had lost everything. In 1951, Bill and Sylvia moved to their new home at 77 Yarra Street, which was part of the original block that they bought in 1921.

Their house survived the 1962 fires, due to Bill's efforts. When the fire jumped the river behind their property Bill and Sylvia were home on their own. Their neighbors on either side were absent. Bill, then aged 75 and a foundation member of the Warrandyte Fire Brigade, dealt with the fires on his own place and those on either side before help arrived, at one stage turning the hose on himself to save being overcome by smoke.

Sylvia was much more con-cerned with a ringtail possum that cerned with a ringtail possum that had been singed than the fire which was heading towards the house. The possum, realising that it was on a good thing took up residence in the oak tree, a tree that has stood unscathed through more than 100 years of flood, fire and storm.

Sylvia faced many trials through her long and eventful life. She lived through two world wars, brought up a family through the greatest depression this country has known as well as enduring floods and devastating bush fires. She faced these trials and overcame them with a steadfast faith and determination that never left her. Axe of celebration

It was a hot January day, the bright pink Hyacinth Orchid belied the dryness of the hills. Large succulent orchids swaying in the blue haze heat waves.

Someone is disturbed. In the process of mending a stone axehead a strange vision comes. Clouds and change. White sails of an unimaginable ship. Then gone. A bewildering nothing. He leaves the axe and walks down the porth-east slope facing Andersons Creek and nothing. He leaves the axe and walks down the north-east slope facing Andersons Creek and home. Smoke curls from the fire of kinship. Song and voices fill the creek flats. He will tell his family of the strange daydream and fix his axe tomorrow.

Clouds and masts of tall ships do pass by. In the very place where the axe owner worked now stands a house owner. A contractor is putting in a driveway and, being in Warrandyte, looks out for gold (more visions of the past). In the day a speck of gold is found (always a speck, just like fifth division tatts-lotto). The dig is on, and unexpectedly the axehead is recovered from its long humanless sojourn.

Not of local stone, it is an obvious presence of somewhere and someone else. Across the mind's eye pass pictures of other people, other realities, other ownerships. The strange feeling of someone else's possessions found in your own home passes over our Warrandyte resident. Clouds across the historical horizon.

Pieces of a puzzle that we have yet to put together as a nation.

Lying in the palm of the hand, it is heavy and smooth. Fitting comfortably in the hand it is an obvious link between two cultures, which are so close, yet so removed from each other.

The stone for the axe was quarried at Mt William near Lancefield. It has travelled along the trade routes of the Kulin people. It has brought tribespeople together and fulfilled social obligations. It is an object of ceremonial importance as much as it is a useful tool. Further up the same north-east slope, another axe has been found, buried in ashes. The cremation ashes of a Wurundjeri tribal member. The spirits are all about us.

Hot January. Dry spells that test your mettle. Long, hot mesmerising days of flies and flagwaving. The cooler dusk air full of fragrant Sweet Bursaria flowers. Creamy blossoms of the Messmate and Narrow-leaf Pepermint feed the birds and insects, thankful for these summer bloomers. The sickled elegant leaves of the Lightwood Wattle, yellow dots of sun freekled on bright, cool green.

Acts of celebration, and an earnest search for who we are and our relationship to this wondrous land. Search the pysche for fire, drought and flooding rains. Televisions of the hour. Are we living in a manner that this land retains its ecological values which can contribute to our greater understanding of the world.

Axe of celebration sits warmly in my hand

The protesting group is annoyed and dissatisfied with this response, saying that "it is obvious that Joan Kirner has not been involved." As Kirner has not been involved. As the Diary went to press, they were seeking a meeting with her.

We questioned Jim Allinson, manager of the Melbourne region of the department, about the transfer. He replied in a letter to the editor, which is published in this issue.

And that management plan? It appears to have fallen into a hole, but maybe temporarily. Some of the key people who have been involved in it, apart from Ken, have left or have been on sick leave. Deadlines for various stages will be overshot. Jim Allinson says that a new appointment will be made as soon as possible. Chris Worrall, who has been second in charge for the past two years, is acting ranger-incharge. He and three other rangers are caring for our park.

charge. He and three other rangers are caring for our park.

Glen Jameson says: "Warrandyte State Park is close to head office and is just too much under the magnifying glass. Rangers just don't get moved like this."

Meanwhile local groups are determined to have Ken Gurney reinstated.

Reasons for Gurney move

Thank you for your invitation of (sic) making a statement to your readers on the changed role of Ken Gurney from Ranger-in-Charge at Warrandyte State Park to technical officer, Fisheries and Wildlife. Both positions are within this Department of Conservation, Forests and Lands and the Melbourne region, for which I am responsible.

This is not an issue for public debate. Ken's positive attributes of public relations, interpretations and enforcement of acts and regulations will be fully utilised in his new role. This work of assisting to protect commercial and recreational fisheries and reducing illegal traffickcommercial and recreational fish-eries and reducing illegal traffick-ing of native wildlife will provide opportunity for development of his career. His further training and de-velopment will be supported, in-cluding his continuing attendance at the B.Appl.Sc degree course at the Rusden Campus of Victoria College. Ken and I have agreed to special arrangements which support him in the transition period.

Warrandyte State Park management does not depend on any one member of staff but rather this flows from the entire staff at the park, region and the department, including the National Parks and Wildlife Division (responsible for statewide policy) working cooperatively with the community. Most of the recent improvements in the park, including roading (sic), office accommodation, depot facilities, water supply, and activities such as the "comet walk" "music festival" and importantly the current planning process is a result of this interaction.

Concern in the community at the

this interaction.

Concern in the community at the transfer of ranger staff to other work centres in the state is unecessary, given that movement is essential for the long-term training and development of staff. This is particularly important for those who intend to make their career in the technical area of natural resource management. source management.

Irrespective of staff changes, resources will be made available to have the draft plan completed as scheduled in April-May. Ken Gurney will be involved in the production of the draft. Since Ken started his new work the planners have commenced regular meetings with park staff to good effect. This will ensure that the present staff are committed to the plan and that it is a plan that can be practically implemented.

A new appointment will be made as soon as possible.

A plea to keep the coppers

January, 1888: I do not think it possible that we shall be left without police protection, although the Government have taken premises for a camp at Ringwood. It certainly would not be convenient for our magistrates to attend there.

In view of the very important changes that will probably take place here for the better, i.e., the Pound Bend water and electric scheme (which I understand is about to be placed on the English market); a probable tram or railway, which in itself would bring such an influx of visitors that it would be very injudicious for the Government to leave us high and dry in the cold with respect to police protection.

The clear proceeds of the concert in aid of our church fund, held last December, amounted to five pounds. To the hon. secretary, Mr Brown, and the committee great thanks are due.

Mr Wood, who recently left the Warrandyte police station for Elsternwick, has been made a senior constable. Some little time ago Mr S.C. Wood was made the recipient of a testimonial engrossed on parchment, signed by Capt Selby, W. Hutchinson and J. Bell JPs and the leading residents of the Creek, testifying to his honorable and intelligent conduct as constable while stationed here.

A report 100 years old from the Warrandyte correspondent of the Evelyn Observer

ASSAULT CASE
On Wednesday evening, the 18th inst., two men named Henry Thompson, of Melbourne, and John Johnson, a miner here, were having some dispute in the Anderson's Creek Hotel, when Thompson seized a glass and smashed it on Johnson's head. Constable Williamson was sent for, and took Thompson in charge.

(LL.B.)

On Thursday morning he was brought before Mr W. Hutchinson JP and fined two pounds. Johnson was very badly cut, and had to go to Heidelberg, to Dr James, to have his head dressed, as it was feared pieces of glass still remained in his wounds. Johnson intends to sue for compensation if the matter is not settled.

RAILWAY MEETING AT

ANDERSON'S CREEK
February, 1888: A very enthusiastic meeting was held in the hall, Anderson's Creek, on Monday last. Captain Selby, in a few well-chosen remarks, stated the object, and called upon Mr Smedley to explain what the Doncaster League was doing.

doing.

Mr Smedley gave a synopsis of the work they were doing in connection with the proposed railway route through Doncaster, and fully concurred with the action taken by the inhabitants of Anderson's Creek in trying to get a continua-tion to them.

Creek in trying to get a continuation to them.

Mr Meader thought that this district, which had been sadly neglected, could, with great fairness, call upon the Government to assist them in this matter. A railway through Doncaster to Anderson's Creek would not only prove payable, but the Government resources would doubly repay the Government for their expenditure.

Mr Louis Grant stated that God had made a beautiful place, clean, good water, and scenery unrivalled in the colony. We have the oldest goldfield, which has been merely scratched. With a railway, the place would be studded with villas; and the Government, holding all the land, would recoup themselves twofold for the expense of the railway.

Mr Henry Stiggants Int proposed twofold for the expense of the railway.

Mr Henry Stiggants Inr proposed the following resolution: "That the present meeting form itself into a railway league (in conjunction with the Doncaster League) and that a committee be formed, with a secretary and treasurer; and a deputation from such committee, with our local members, etc., wait upon the Minister for Railways, for the purpose of getting the present railway survey through Doncaster extended to Anderson's Creek."

Now, here's a challenge, chum of my childhood. You have my full

And I've been meaning to speak to you about that, too. Your missus reckons that glass is welded to your fist. And she's been real worried ever since you started taking that stubby holder to bed.

It's like a security blanket. What have you got against security blankets?

Nothing, but you're the only 35-year-old kid I've seen lately with the equivalent of one. Anyhow, I digress. You may have noticed that the lovely Lee Tindale has taken an unusually long holiday this year. He's contemplating his navel down at Portarlington.

Yeah, they reckon the Grand's beer sales have plummeted.

Well, Tinners does the sports pages of the Diary, and I've been lumbered with them while he's down there doing his whale imitations. Jenny Chapman's down a lovely job with the cric¹/₂et, but I've still got a space to fill on the back page. It's gotta be something to do with sport, and, look, I'm not all that up-to-date with the jolly hockey sticks types around town. Got any ideas?

What about scandal at the cricket club. I heard that...

Nah, we' got cricket on the page.
Football then. They reckon that...

So after this wild party in North Warrandyte one night a bunch of them took a slab, five birds, and went down there and... down there and...

Our women show the way again

The highlight of recent play for the Warrandyte Cricket Club were the A grade women's win over top side Bentleigh and the third eleven's defeat of Ainslie Park.

Defending their first inning's total of 181, the women had little trouble in dismissing Benteligh for 100 runs. Fine fielding and a brilliant display of fast bowling from Sharryn Egeberg, with 7/28 from 14 overs, enabled Warrandyte to cruise to victory.

In the thirds match, Warrandyte overhauled Ainslie Park's first in-nings total of 130. Andrew Crocket contributed 34 of Warrandyte's contributed 34 of warrandyte's 151 runs.

In the most recent round of two-day games for the juniors, the under-12 As put on an outstanding performance, scoring 7/238. Billy Hose, S. Bell, R. Leigh, M. Close and M. Fraser all got among the runs. It was a total to give the boys confidence for a big win over Vermont.

The under-12 Bs bundled out Heathmont Baptists for only 44. M. Chapman and P. Saaksjarvi took three wickets each. Although Warrandyte lost 4/32, they should improve.
