Co-op buys site for seniors' cottages

A property has been pur-chased in Warrandyte as a site for a cluster of cottages for retired residents.

The site, in Harris Gully Road (pictured below), has been bought by the Warrandyte Community Retirement Housing Co-operative, formerly a subcommittee of the Warrandyte Community Association.

Speaking at the annual general meeting of WCA last month, committee member Doug Seymour told the gathering, "A property of just over half an acre has been purchased, which we hope to develop into a small cluster of five retirement units".

Committee member Sarah Wrigley explained that "the present initiative began at a public forum, held last September, to discuss the lack of local retirement housing options."

A number of sites have been investigated since, but none are readily available.

"An opportunity recently came up when long-standing local resident Mr Frank Doyle found himself having to find alternative accommodation away from Warrandyte," Ms Wrigley said.

The proposal followed an appeal in the June issue of the Diary, suggesting people in Mr Doyle's predicament might consider selling their property and occupying one of the units when the land was developed for retirement housing.

"Mr Doyle's family approached the committee (now the cooperative)," Ms Wrigley said, "and suggested his property in Harris Gully Road would be suitable."

The site is within easy walking distance of Goldfields Plaza shopping centre, medical facilities and public transport.

"The family and the co-operative have now entered into a contract to purchase the site, with bridging finance provided by one of the directors of the cooperative," Ms Wrigley said.

"We are delighted to get this property and are grateful to the Doyle family for this demonstration of the Warrandyte spirit in giving first option to WCA and the community," said Doug Seymour, a co-operative director.

and appropriate to the environment.

The co-operative has written to the neighbours to get their views on the development and has held discussions with Manningham council.

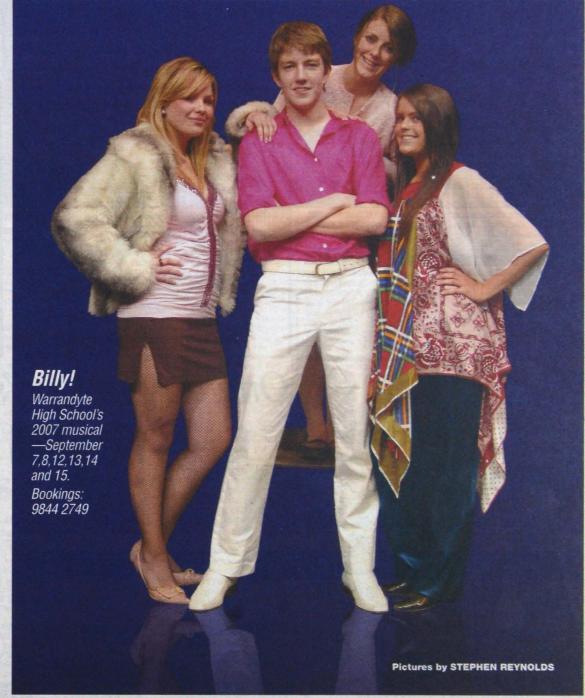

"All our enquiries to date have been very encouraging," Mr Seymour said. "We now need the community to get behind us to make this happen."

While bridging finance has been provided, the co-operative will be seeking other sources of funding from the community and government. "We will be asking the community to become paid-up members of the co-operative," Ms Wrigley said. "We will also be seeking local support in terms of project management, building and land-scaping."

OUR NEWSPAPER

The Warrandyte Diary was established in 1970 as a small local newsletter. Although it has developed over the years, it has retained its strong community character, being produced by volunteers with only one aim: to serve its community. Financed solely through advertising, it guards its not-for-profit, non-commercial status and its independent voice. The Diary carries a strong editorial bias towards the people, environment and character of the place it serves. Its monthly circulation is 4000 copies and it is available in Warrandyte, North Warrandyte, South Warrandyte, Park Orchards, Wonga Park, Warranwood, North Ringwood, Kangaroo Ground and Research

A SPECIAL PLACE

Warrandyte (approximate population 8000) is situated on the Yarra River, some 24km from Melbourne. For countless ages a well-stocked hunting ground of the Wurundjeri people, in 1851 Warrandyte became the site of the first official gold discovery in Victoria. It soon established its character as a small, self-sustaining community set in a beautiful river valley. Around 1900 the miners, orchardists and tradespeople were joined by a number of young painters who were founding the Australian nationalist arts tradition. Now a commuter suburb of Melbourne, the natural beauty, community spirit and sense of independence of Warrandyte has been largely retained. This newspaper is the voice and true expression of that spirit.

WARRANDYTE'S NEW BRIDGE - SUGGESTIONS TO MAKE YOU CROSS

One day in God's own suburb..

HE sun shone. The birds sang. The children ran, laugh-ing, beside the river. The ducks quacked expectantly, some of them native to the area. The cappuccino machines gurgled. The tills rang in the gift shops. The traffic hummed lazily up Yarra Street.

Another perfect Sunday morning in Warrandyte. The Trotts were at home, of course. Who goes into town on a Sunday? Especially now they've gone and told the tourists where all the car parks are.

It was just before midday It was just before midday and Narelle and the children, Cinnamon and Jasper, sat on the deck that ran right along the front of the house, jutting high over their precipitous block on the upside of Dingley Dell. Two gladlywrapped barbecue meat trays from IGA lay on the table of the all-season synthetic wicker pa-IGA lay on the table of the all-season synthetic wicker pa-tio setting. A perspex salad bowl accompanied it, com-plete with exotically carved serving spoons, reminders of the family's recent holiday in Fiji, only $969 per person for five days. Every coup has a silver lining. A few puny tomatoes sat to the side, the only vegetable the rabbits had rejected in Cinnamon's had rejected in Cinnamon's personal vegie patch. Cinna-mon was a vegan and knew a lot about vegetables, but there was a gap in her fenc-ing knowledge.

All in all it was a perfect day to christen the new bar-living with The Trotts

becue Neville had snapped up for a song at the opening sale of the new Bunnings in Eltham. Six burners, oven hood and one of those wok burners-no one ever uses burners—no one ever uses them but they're worth hav-ing. It was a beauty! "Get any gas?" Neville's mother had enquired. "Breaking in the new bar-

"Lovely day for it! Where's Nev?" "Down at Riverview getting some gas!" Narelle yelled back. The sun had gone behind a cloud, taking the warmth with it, but with a view like this with it, but with a view like this what was a bit of cold! The Trotts loved the Warrandyte bush. "God's own suburb!" Neville liked to say. From their deck you could look right over the Rumley's shack opposite to the State Park. You hardly noticed the Park. You hardly noticed the piles of timber and the car bodies. After a while.

"Ah well, can't waste all day nattering!" shouted Bernie firing up the whipper snipper. The steady whine was barely perceptible, except during the brief moments when the chainsaw stopped over the road. It was winter after all, and someone had to keep the home fires burning.

"Nothing gets done sitting on your fanny!" said Gran.

"Ma Rumley's started up the pot belly already!" Narelle observed to no one in particular. "Better bring the washing in!" "Here's Dad!" announced Jasper, and sure enough the Landcruiser turned into the drive and revved its way up the slope to the carport at the side of the house. Neville was conscious of the environmental impact of fourwheel drives but a man has to be able to get up his own driveway.

By the time Narelle came through the screen door, washing safely folded on the dining room table, Neville was in full swing, all shiny

"Life is a cabernet!"

"When's John Chapman going to do that deck out the back?" she asked, rubbing the smoke out of her eyes. It was getting quite thick now.

"Apparently he's very busy," said Neville, transfer-ring blackened meat onto the plate Narelle had brought with her. "I think it's the sausages!" he added by way of clarification, probably un-necessarily. necessarily.

"Lunch everyone!" yelled Narelle, taking advantage of a short break in the chainsawing. Bernie had put down the whipper-snipper and was blowing leaves from one place to another, relatively quietly, so you could easily hear the motorbikes on KG Road.

North Warrandyte and Warrandyte could be connected by a pedestrian bridge across the Yarra.

The Warrandyte Lions Club is investigating the possibility of constructing a bridge spanning the river from the car park at the end of Taroona Avenue, near Pound Bend, to the reserve at Bradley's Lane

Bradley's Lane.
The Lions Club has consulted both Manningham and Nillumbik councils and the Warrandyte CFA and Bicycle Victoria about the project.

Victoria about the project.

Both councils are supportive of the project. The bridge will serve to connect the two electorates, making the Warrandyte township more accessible to residents of North Warrandyte.

John Boyle, a member of the Lions Club, told the Diary, "It will mean that school children can walk or ride bikes to both primary schools and Warrandyte High School from North War-randyte instead of having to be driven through the town. This could free up some of the morning traffic problems on Research Road and Yarra Street. It would also give greater access to the West End shops for North Warrandyte residents

The Warrandyte CFA and Bicycle The Warrandyte CFA and Bicycle Victoria have both expressed their support for the bridge. A river crossing in that area would make it easier for residents to cross the river quickly in the event of a fire. It would also connect North Warrandyte with the biggels patently also the properties of the pr

Local resident Don Hughes is a lieutenant colonel in the Royal Australian Engineers for the Defence Force and was involved in building a pedestrian bridge in Warburton in 2000. It was a steel, rope and timber swing bridge built as a community project between the Army and the local community.

Mr Hughes told the Diany, that while "there was a big bureaucratic process with many different groups and authorities to consult, however the bridge brought together a community which was quite divided by the river. Both sides of the river were quite separate. was quite divided by the river. Both sides of the river were quite separate but the bridge united them by allowing easier access, also by creating a project for both sides to work on together."

The Warburton bridge has a 34 metre span with nine metre towers at each end, with a one metre wide timber walkway, six metres above the river bed.

Lions Club president lan Shugg said that a timber swing bridge would be "ideal for the area."
The Lions Club special projects committee would partially fund the project.

Mr Shugg said, "The bridge would have lots of advantages to the community.

We are just trying to get the project off the ground at the moment. We are consulting with the different groups involved and gathering interest."

A meeting with federal member Kevin Andrews and the Lions Club has been arranged for later this month in an effort to gain federal support. The Lions Club is investigating the possibility of involving the engineering faculty of Melbourne University or the Army.

A timber footbridge crossing the river in Warrandyte was washed away in the floods of 1934 and there has not been one since.

The road bridge connecting Kangaroo Ground-Warrandyte Road and Yarra Street is the only major river crossing between Fitzsimmons Lane in Templestowe and Yarra Glen.

• The Diary invites readers' comments on this project.

Lights? Next year

By EMMA CLARK

The long-awaited traffic lights crossing in Yarra Street will be completed by May next year, according to VicRoads. In October last year, the Diary reported that Manningham council had allocated $287,000 to install the crossing, as part of a $719,000 funding package from the state government. The project was set to be completed by mid-2007.

Manningham council told the Diary that the project had been taken on by VicRoads.

Steve Brown, regional metro southeast manager, said that "VicRoads has recently received funding in their 2007-08 budget for the development of a pedestrian crossing in Yarra Street, Warrandyte".

Plum trees are 'woody weeds'

I'm often intrigued by how people can have such very different views regarding the one scenario, so I had to grin when I read Rosalie Loo's "Old plum trees add to picturesque character" in the June edition. My view couldn't be more different.

I have to admit I see our local landscape through the prism of my great interest (passion might be more accurate!) for helping wildlife recover from the battering it's been given over the last century and a half. Consequently I've done a lot of work in the 16 years we've lived here to help repair damaged vegetation communities; this has mainly been a mix of planting and weeding. So I'm very familiar with the woody weeds.

And while I do love John Williamson's "Give me a home among the gum Williamson's "Give me a home among the gum trees..." I reckon the plum trees he's talking about are on private property.

Also does she realise that two-thirds of our state's original vegetation has been obliterated? It follows that our wildlife has been restricted to one third of its original territory, which explains the numerous deaths and extinctions.

SUPPORT LOCAL TRADERS

'True expression' of this place

This issue of the Diary is our 400th. SANDY BURGOYNE has researched our story and here presents an account of the first 37 years of Warrandyte's "priceless" newspaper...

HE first copies of the Warrandyte Diary slid off the press in early December 1970 into a very different world. A new Austin X6 car cost $A2598 A new Austin X6 car cost $A2598 including tax and the Royal Commission into the collapse of Melbourne's West Gate Bridge continued. In May of that year more than 70,000 people packed the streets of Melbourne in the Vietnam moratorium march—protesting at the involvement of Australian troops in the Vietnam War.

In mid-1970 the recently formed Warrandyte youth club was trying to make its activities known in the community. Committee member Cliff Green was put in charge of publicity. He sent regular notices to the commercial local paper, but without success. "I found they weren't interested in stories about Warrandyte ... We couldn't get anything in," he remembered of that time.

The youth club committee resolved to start The youth club committee resolved to start its own newsletter with Cliff Green as editor. This publication would be about the whole community, not just the youth club and would be named the Warrandyte Diary — "Warrandyte" to give a feeling of belonging to a place and "Diary" to show it would inform residents of community events. It would circulate in what the club considered to be the local community and not stop at the river — North Warrandyte would be included.

This project was to be funded totally from and not stop at the river — North Warrandyte would be included.

This project was to be funded totally from advertising and Cliff Green made a dummy of the new publication to show to prospective advertisers. "I started to tread the streets around Warrandyte looking for advertising. The first advertiser I signed up was Peter McDougall (real estate agent). I walked into his office and he took a nice big ad. I walked out of his office and Ron Day (a contractor) was sitting in his truck and I put it on Ron Day and he signed up. I think Tom Kerkhof (television repairs) came along and Ron Day said, 'here, you'd better be in this too'. So within a matter of half an hour I had this run of advertisers," he said.

Cliff made a number of decisions with that first issue that continue today. For instance, the publication would be produced monthly except January. The Diary's staff of reporters, photographers, cartoonists and many others would be volunteers, but the money from selling advertising space would pay for professional type-setting and printing. As the newspaper didn't have ing space would pay for professional type-set-ting and printing. As the newspaper didn't have an office he affixed a large yellow letterbox to the old cypress tree in Yarra Street (which is now known as the "Diary tree"), where locals could leave news leads and copy for their ad-vertisements

One decision that didn't turn out was to have the youth club children deliver the Diary to every letterbox in the district. Cliff Green recalled, "when we found the first bundle of (newspa-

"when we found the first bundle of (newspapers) trapped in Anderson's Creek we decided that wasn't working". The solution was simple. "We went around ... and every business we asked was prepared to take them on the counter and that's how they've been distributed ever since," Cliff Green said.

Peter Lovett, a sports sub-editor with the now defunct afternoon paper The Herald, offered his help early in the Diary's history. He wasn't particularly complimentary about the appearance of the publication. "You wouldn't call that a newspaper. You've got to get professional about it," he is quoted as saying. Lovett set about changing the Diary into a newspaper. He added "hard news" reporting to the notification of past and future events and gravitated news stories to the front and concentrated sport on the present.

The Diary has been fortunate in the drive, vision and talent of its editors, but the success the paper enjoys today would not have been possible without the other capable staff who freely gave of their time. Many of these people have had a long association with the newspaper for instance, lock Magneish provided a per. For instance, Jock Macneish provided a cartoon for the first issue in 1970 and he re-mains a regular contributor today. In the days of letterpress, illustrations were expensive to prepare for inclusion. In August 1971 the Diary ran a Macneish cartoon of a public meeting at the Mechanics' Institute that showed around the Mechanics' Institute that showed around 30 people bursting out of the hall. On the far right-hand side of the illustration two larger figures were discussing the mayhem occurring at the meeting. Cliff Green and Peter Lovett (then co-editors) realised they could use these two characters. They had the printer cut off that side of the block ready to be used on its own side of the block ready to be used on its own. The editors could then have the two cartoon characters, now named Clyde & Ocker, regularly comment on any topic for the cost of a few lines of hot metal type. These two caricatures continue to comment regularly in the Diary on topics both serious and flippant, although the technical and financial imperatives that led to their creation no longer exist.

service to the community by way of its cadet reporter scheme. Jan Tindale, the newspaper's chief of staff for many years, unofficially started this involvement during the mid 1980s when she invited high school students to write for the paper. "We'll assign them a job and see how they go. After two or three stories we do expect them to take over themselves and start using their own imagination and ... finding their own stories," she said of the process. The first task is usually a short article on a community event that requires simple reporting without the need for extensive research.

A minority of the Diary's young reporters go on to become regular contributors, following on to university studies and a career in journalism. Clinton Grybas was appointed cadet reporter in 1994. He went on to become part of the sports commentary team on commercial radio station 3AW. mentary team on commercial radio station 3AW and make regular appearances on Fox Sport. Emma Clark and Joanne Green are the current Diary cadets

Former editor Bob Millington believes that the Diary has endured because it has remained in touch with its readers. "It's because it's always got plenty of people in it, stories about people. It's a cliché, but it does have the pulse of the town. I think it's always also battled for the

For 37 years the Warrandyte Diary has carried the local news—news that originates in Warrandyte; news that is important to the residents of Warrandyte; news that touches the lives of Warrandyte residents — news that will never be on the agenda of the Melbourne dailies. The Diary has gone beyond the passive reporting Diary has gone beyond the passive reporting of community events to present the readers with important issues that may not yet be on the public agenda, such as ring roads, zoning, building standards and conservation of the environment.

The Diary also reports the news that makes a community: the amateur theatre, the schools, the sports, the gossip and the obituaries. In reporting to the community the paper has not taken itself too seriously. It has always included humour through the columnists such as Smokey Joe and through its cartoons. In the Digry the community has a quality newspaper. Diary the community has a quality newspaper that is well designed and the editors and staff have always tried to maintain high standards of journalism and ethics.

Journaism and ethics.

The Diary has united a community. It has redefined Warrandyte as a place, as it has always treated North Warrandyte as a part of the community. Local people have always considered this to be the case but the local weekly newspapers and the municipal councils believe them to be separate places with different interests.

writing the "in Red and write" column under the guise of "Smokey Joe" in June 1974 and continued until ill-health caused him to cease at the end of 2005. He died a few months later.

At the beginning of 1976 the Diary was without an editor and the first three issues were not produced. It seemed that the Warrandyte Diary would go the way of many other community. would go the way of many other community newspapers and quietly disappear. Lee Tindale took on the editorship and ran the publication with the help of his wife Jan. "I had no intention of stepping in but no-one else would, or did, so I came home with a new baby to do by myself," he said of that time.

he said of that time.

Fortunately early in 1979 Judy Macdonald and Jan Vagg, although neither had a journalistic background, jointly took on the editorship. Finding enough content for the Diary was always a challenge and Judy Macdonald described what she called "Yellow Box Disease", "the symptoms of which were not being able to drive or walk past the old cypress tree without stopping and peering hopefully through the slot of the yellow 'Diary box'. Usually it was empty, except for something with eight legs which was peering back."

Ken Virtue and his wife Lee took on the editorship in 1981. "We thought that (it) would be a good way to get to know people and the community. To be quite honest I really didn't realise what I was getting myself into," he said.

Virtue was an active member of the Warrandyte

Arts Association and he sought to increase the Diary's coverage of the arts.

With the next change of editors in 1983 career journalists were once more in charge — Bob journalists were once more in charge — Bob Millington and Mark Davis who both worked at The Age. They immediately set about a task that was long overdue. The Diary was still produced via letterpress (also called hot metal), a technology that apart from mechanisation had its roots in Gutenberg's 15th century press. Within three months of taking over the co-editors had moved to offset printing. Millington pushed on to redesign the appearance of the paper. In 1987 he completed his vision for the Diary when he changed from the current "bastard" page size to tabloid. However, the job of assembling the newspaper remained a cottage industry. Millington remembered that the Diary was put newspaper remained a cottage industry. Millington remembered that the Diary was put together, "on the pine table in the kitchen of our house ... The most technological thing we ever had was an electric typewriter."

An editorial committee ran the paper from 1990 to 1993 when Cliff Green took over as news editor with Lee Tindale as sports editor.

At the end of 1991, 21 years after its foundation, the Warrandyte Diary finally moved into its own office in the Community Centre on Yarra Street. For the first time in its history the Diary was in the midst of the community it served and Warrandyte residents could visit the street-front office. By this time, Cliff Green and Lee Tindale were co-editors. Apart from the and Lee Tindale were co-editors. Community garden taps into water supply from above Rising to the challenge of water conservation, the Warrandyte Community Garden has installed a rainwater tank at their garden in Police Street.

The tank collects water from the roof of the new police station next door, which is then reticulated around the garden, supplementing the mains supply and acting as an emergency water supply during drought.

The Community Garden, an initiative of the Police and Citizens Advisory Committee, was established in April, 1999.

Community centre's A productive year future looks secure

By CLIFF GREEN

By CLIFF GREEN

The question of the future management of the Warrandyte Community Centre was a major topic of discussion at the recent annual general meeting of the Warrandyte Community Association. "The Warrandyte community must not fall asleep again and lose control of this valuable asset," WCA president Dick Davies told the meeting. "Manningham have sensibly extended the current contract with the centre's supporters group (which Jock Macneisn, is unable to continue with the voluntary workload. A new manage-ment team is needed," Mr Davies said.

The meeting generally agreed that the Warrandyte Community Centre Support-

Community Centre Supporters Group, an incorporated body, should continue to run the centre, but it needed revitalisation—"new blood"—in particular a new chairperson.

There was some disquiet expressed about the role of the centre in the community. "Perhaps it's been too successful," someone said. There were complaints from community groups than from community groups than when they rang to book a room for a committee meet-ing—or whatever—perma-nent and ongoing bookings meant there was no space available

"Perhaps this gives the impression that the community is not welcome in its own centre. Is there a need for a meeting room to be kept available, a space dedicated to occasional—or perhaps—monthly bookings?"

It was pointed out that the committee needs to "balance its books" and permanent bookings enable the council "rent" of approximately $5000 a year to be met.

Cr Pat Young of Manningham council suggested that this amount did not even cover maintenance of the

There must be people in the Warrandyte community who are prepared to assist in this rewarding and essential role. We would love to hear from them."

Jock Macneish can be contacted on 9844 4164.

The Warrandyte Community Association has enjoyed a busy and productive year, president Dick Davies reported at the association's annual general meeting recently.

A summary of his report follows.

Retirement accommodation for older members of the commu-nity who otherwise will leave to live elsewhere has been a top

Our strategy has been to provide a forum for the community to pursue the issue. WCA held a forum on retirement accomodation in Warrandyte in 2006 and as a result established a sub-committee to review and pursue options.

pursue options.

This sub-committee is now becoming incorporated in its own right as an non-trading cooperative and will follow up the issue independently of the WCA. This is advisable as their mandate and objectives may well diverge from those of the WCA.

Local and state government

We are now holding twice yearly meetings with Manningham council. Major issues under discussion are the future management of the Warrandyte Community Centre (see report this page), retirement housing and heritage planning for Warrandyte township.

WCA made a submission to the Victorian Electoral Commission council representation review regarding boundary changes in Manningham. We argued for preservation of the existing eight member council and retention of existing boundaries to Mullum Mullum Ward (with minor revision) to retain the community of interest between Warrandyte, Park Orchards and Wonga Park. However, VEC found in favour of a nine member council with revised boundaries.

Following last year's AGM, WCA bold on white forms with Following last year's AGM, WCA held a public forum with state MPs and local councillors. Prior to the state election, we held a lively, well attended candidates' forum.

warrandyte in becember 2005, we established a traffic and transport sub-committee which has participated in a Nillumbik transport survey and held discussions with police regarding emergency services and plans for Warrandyte.

We have sought clarification of emergency relief centre procedures for both councils. Whilst local councils and police and emergency services have well-laid plans, there is some confusion in the public mind regarding procedures. For example, one member queried where she could safely go in the event of a declared fire ban day.

ban day. We will issue a comprehensive review of emergency procedures in the spring, prior to the next fire season.

Development

WCA raised concerns about WCA raised concerns about several development issues. These were: 250 Research Road (resolved successfully), 32 Mullins Road, post office building re-development, Donvale Christian School ex-vansion in the Green Wedte. pansion in the Green Wedge (opposed and lost at a panel hearing, Deep Creek residen-tial development (resolved successfully), unauthorised roadside verge construction in Winding Way, and unautho-rised mountain bike construc-tion in Chase Reserve.

Environment

WCA has consistently lobbied

WCA has consistently lobbied state government regarding under-funding of the Warrandyte State Park. At our last AGM, Danielle Green (MHR for Yan Yean) presented figures showing an increase in the Park's budget from $514,000 in 2001/02 to $874,767 in 2006/07.

North of the Warrandyte Bridge—the so called "Gateway to North Warrandyte"—is a mess of signage. Nillumbik has allocated funding of $44,580 for engineering, landscaping and site works in the area.

An important policy development for the coming year will be WCA's proposal to develop guidelines for economically viable and sustainable business consistent with the Green Wedge. Much Green Wedge land lies derelict with no incentive for owners to maintain or improve it. Under WCA's mandate to protect the Green Wedge we must seek solutions to improve this amenity.

Sport and recreation

Congratulations to committee member David Dyason who has initiated a draft policy on issues initiated a grait policy on Issues and facilities for young people in Warrandyte. Initial discussions have centred around finding local accommodation for the Warrandyte Netball Club and developing support for adventure canoeing for primary age students. A sub-committee age students. A sub-committee has been formed to address this issue.

Canadian Greens leader Frank de Jong recently visited Warrandyte at the invitation of local Greens candidate David Ellis.

According to Mr Ellis, Mr de Jong took the opportunity to compare Melbourne's planning issues with those of his native Toronto, emphasising the need for what he call "walkable" communities communities.

"Current urban planning is based in the presumption that everyone has a car," Mr de Jong said. "This is clearly not so. For a start, the young and the old are effectively excluded.

"I imagine that young people in Warrandyte, whether for employment or access to services would be only too aware of this."

would be only too aware of this.

"Also excluded are those who cannot afford a car, or the fuel for a car. That last group is only going to increase as world oil shortages take effect."

Mr de Jong is in Australia to give a series of lectures on "true-cost" economics. He sees both Australia and Canada as "sharing the mixed blessing of being a lucky country with relatively abundant mineral resources.

"In your case, that means coal and uranium; in our case, uranium and tar sands. Nillumbik is also engaged in a four-year program to resurface sports grounds with drought tolerant grass and to install irrigation. advice on how residents can cut their household emissions.

Ms Strempl talked about the rebates that were recently introduced for roof insulation; a 30 per cent rebate is now available for the cost of insulation, up to $300, and an amount up to $1500 is being offered for the installation of solar hot water systems. She also mentioned changing household lighting to compact fluorescent globes. These use up to 80 per cent less energy than incandescent globes.

Stuart McQuire, owner of a model sustainable home in West Brunswick, told the gathering how, in the past 10 years, he had cut his electricity usage by 100 per cent and his gas usage by 63 per cent by installing his own solar energy supply. He has sealed out draughts, utilised grey water and has composted food scraps instead of letting them go to landfill.

WarrandyteCAN offered cheap compact fluorescent light globes at the meeting. They had invited Yarra Valley Water to arrange a showerhead changeover. However the authority declined.

Further information on WarrandyteCAN and its policies is available from Wayne Rankin on 9844 1959.

Mortgagees suffer stress

According to the ALP candidate for Menzies (which includes Warrandyte), "a whopping 27.6 percent of households with a mortgage are all suffering mortgage stress".

It has taken eight months to restore the car. The Variety Bash requires such modifications as stone guards and the strengthening of suspension systems for all Bash entrants. They have scrutineers who make sure the cars reach the necessary safety

With only a few weeks until the Bash, the car is fully restored and decorated, the accommodation is booked; only their costumes await final adjustment. The costumes, like the car, are Gilligan's Island themed.

The theme was decided because Barry and Harry owned a houseboat last year. "Barry looks like the Skipper, I look like Gilligan...and Colin has long black hair so he's Maryanne." Harry said. "He wasn't too happy about that at first."

This year the Bash will travel between Melbourne and Byron Bay, stopping at places such as Nhill, Broken Hill and Tamworth along the way. It is expected to take 10 days.

Middle Yarra Sustainable Gardening Award Competition

Do you have a sustainable garden? If so, we want to hear from you. The Middle Yarra Sustainable Gardening Awards recognise composting, worm farms, vegie gardens, indigenous planting, rainwater and greywater systems, local fauna habitat, or any other sustainable gardening ideas.

There are three categories (courtyard, urban and rural) allowing you to enter a garden of any shape or size.

Entries close Monday 10 September. Entry forms are available from Council.

Daytime property management

Over 10 years Manningham's Property Management Planning Course has provided many Green Wedge property owners with the skills to develop and implement five-year land management plans.

Council is now running a weekday course, with sessions to be held on 12, 19 and 26 October, and 2, 9 and 16 November, from 9.00 am - 3.00 pm. The course includes tours to showcase properties currently under sustainable management, and provides catering, course notes and property maps. Cost of the course is $60.

Call Lyn Meredith, Environmental Support Officer, on 9840 9326 to find out more or book your spot.

Environment groups

Various Landcare, Friends and Environment groups hold regular activities in Manningham on public and private land, including nursery, planting or weeding sessions, walks, talks and social events.

The four largest groups are now forming a network to exchange knowledge and work together on common projects. Joining one is a great way to get to know your local environment and community.

All welcome new members - you can attend activities on a regular basis or whenever you have time.

For more information contact Cathy Willis, Conservation Officer, on 9840 9122.

Sustainable Gardening series

'Gardening for a Sustainable Future' is a series being run by Council and Sustainable Gardening Australia (SGA), to help residents create a garden that is in harmony with the local environment. The series consists of five sessions, each week between Tuesday 21 August and Thursday 13 September.

Sessions will be held at Council offices. For more information or to book, call Kay Toussaint on 9840 9348. Attendance is free.

Coping with the rural crisis in the hen house

I've finally realised that I just don't have what it takes to be a farmer. It's not that after years and years of bucolic toil I've become world weary struggling to make ends meet on broad agrees or even broad best.

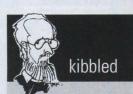

gling to make ends meet on broad acres or even broad hectares. It's just that even coping with the piddling one acre that we farm (sic). I have come to the conclusion that you need to be thicker skinned than I in order to cope with rural hassles.

Like the rest of the population, I found last year's drought tough going. I had assumed that we would be able to use the dam to water the vegie garden and fruit trees. Wrong! As the ground parched the dam shrank until there was nothing for the ducks to swim in, let alone provide water for crops. It was at this stage that I became aware of my rural insecurity.

"It's not fair!" I found myself muttering as our crops withered "Why me?" News

"It's not fair! I found iny-self muttering as our crops withered. "Why me?" News items about global warming, rural collapse, bankruptcy and farmers with Monopoly-sized debts merely confirmed my paranola paranoia.

It's incomprehensible for me to understand the real farmer's psyche. How is it possible to be so understanding and accepting of all that Nature, in Her infinite wisdom, deals out? Whilst I was tearing hair and meaning there wisdoil, deals out: Willist Was tearing hair and moaning, there were farmers standing amidst destroyed crops and swirling dust eddies explaining that this sort of thing happens and that they just have to wait. Waiting,

"I had mortgaged the house to provide enough pellets and wheat to cover our absence..."

it seems, is an essential for farming. Which brings me to the problem of livestock.

There are farmers who have minor issues with herds of cattle mnor issues with herds of cattle and thousands of sheep. Others have goat flocks, horse studs and other simple problems to deal with. I, on the other hand, have a real problem. Non-laying chooks. All three of them! I started out with four. However, we went away for six weeks and deposited the chooks in the care of friends who have a grand enclosure for their four chooks.

Even at that stage, laying, or should I say, non-laying had become a bit of a problem but both my friend and I reasoned that it was just a phase they were going through and that they'd be back "on the lay" in postime.

were going through and that they'd be back "on the lay" in no time.

I had mortgaged the house to provide enough pellets and wheat to cover our absence and had hired a "B Double" to cart them to my friend's place. When we arrived, I carefully introduced my chooks to his. Unexpectedly, instead of them introducing themselves to each other in a civilised manner, a very unseemly fracas began. Instantly, our respective top hens behaved like roosters. Images of Bali flashed through my mind as they ruffled their feathers, rose into the air and with talons unsheathed, went for each other.

Whilst the two gladiators did a Russell Crowe performance, the other chooks ran round in a suitably headless fashion. My friend, a more suitable farmer than I, nodded sagely and wisely commented that they would soon work out the pecking order and all would be well. Evidently commented that they would soon work out the pecking order and all would be well. Evidently they didn't and for the next six weeks the enclosure was like the set for The Gangs of New York, with the two groups, circling each other, occupying different sections of the enclower without once hurring the sections. sure without once burying the hatchet unless it was to be in the skull of one of the opposing gang members' heads. And they still didn't lay!

On our return, we went to collect our livestock only to be informed that one of our income-producing group had died. Predators are always a problem for farmers and we suffered the same fate. It seems that one day our friend's son suffered the same fate. It seems that one day our friend's son came to visit. He has a very playful blue heeler who decided to jump the fence into the day grazing section of the chooks' enclosure. As he sauntered up to one of our hens, to introduce himself no doubt, our chook had a fit of the vapours and instantly died of fright. We were a sad group that made our way home that night.

At home, ensconced in their own pen, our chooks continued to refuse to lay. I pleaded with them, changed their feed and finally rested the axe against their laying boxes as a reminder of what could happen to uncoperative workers. (If only I'd been clever enough to have had them sign an AWA I'd have been able to despatch them much them sign an AWA I'd have been able to despatch them much earlier!)

No doubt you have gathered that the whole rural experience has taken its toll. I pine for a full dam, for cartons full of free range eggs and basketsful of crisp fruit and vegetable. Temporarily, I'm a defeated man. I'm not the stuff of which real farmers are made. I've been forced to deal with drought, failed crops, stressed stock, predatory wildlife, reduced income... And I haven't coped.

'M reminiscing again. It's probably because my life will soon take a new direction that I am now rection that I am now reflecting on the past. I have been looking at some of our old photographs taken of Warrandyte in 1978 and it is somewhat disturbing to think that I am now the same age my mother was back then, and my daughter is now the same age I was in 1978.

Both my parents have since died. Come to think of it, most of the relatives and friends from my parents' generation that my parents' generation that I knew when I was young are gone too. But you never quite get used to it. I still feel young, yet I am no longer young. I can no longer turn to my elders for memories of my young years.

memories of my young years, instead I must rely on photographs and old diaries.

Amongst the old photos of Warrandyte was one taken from the fire tower looking down on an empty received. down on an empty reservoir.
As I discovered later this was once Warrandyte's domestic water supply. The idea to pump water from the river was first mooted in 1947 as Warrandyte's nonulation began to increase water from the river was first mooted in 1947 as Warrandyte's population began to increase. In 1951 four different reticulation schemes were proposed. The option finally chosen involved pumping water directly to a basin on Fourth Hill for Warrandyte's supply and to a tank on Growlers Hill to service Warrandyte North. However, it wasn't until 1961 that the system was up and running. But that is all in the past, the fire tower is long gone and the reservoir filled in.

In 1973 my husband Mike and I left England and set up home in a white-painted weatherboard in Ringwood North. In our battered old Holden we

My early memories of War-My early memories of Warrandyte are of winter wattles, wildflowers in spring, walks with the dog, swimming in the river and exploring the mine tunnels. On one of those visits I recall being stopped at the entrance to Jumping Creek and asked to fill in a government survey on whether the area should become a State Park. Of course we said it should, and inevitably, in 1975, it did.

In the early 1980s I joined a walking group. It was a turning point in my understanding and appreciation of nature. For this appreciation of nature. For this was no ordinary walking group. There was no "see how far you can walk in the shortest possible time".

The weekly activity was run by the Ringwood North Community Centre and called "walking with a naturalist". The naturalist was John Reid and he opened my eyes to a world within the world of nature that I thought I knew.

I knew.

John's walks were all about John's walks were all about walking slowly, taking time to stop, listen, examine closely, smell and even taste the bush. Most of the walks took place in bushland reserves around the local area—Yarran Dheran (Mitcham), 100 Acres (Park Orchards) and Hotchkins Ridge (Croydon), but by far the most visited areas were in the recently formed Warrandyte State

In time John moved on. But In time John Moved on. But he left a priceless legacy. I now look at life differently. I feel com-pelled to write the stories of the bush and to hopefully inspire others the way I was inspired all those years ago.

T was to be a quiet little gathering. A few friends, a few drinks and a few nibbles after dinner one Saturday night. Nothing grand, nothing outrageous, nothing formal. Our daughter's idea of a 21st birthday bash sounded pretty good to me. Easy-peasy. I should have known better.

First we needed "spart in page 1.5"

First we needed "special" paper to make invitations. A quaint little shop in Brunswick, crammed with exquisite hand-made papers, provided a dazzling and arty selection. We eventually escaped with a bagful of gorgeous goodies and an unexpected degree of collateral damage to the Visa card. Eighty or so invitations were lovingly hand-crafted over the following week. Crikey, we hadn't even started on the party proper yet.

hadn't even started on the party proper yet.

The invitations did look special, mind you, but completely did away with the original concept of "nothing grand, nothing outrageous, nothing formal". We had decidedly strayed into the realms of cocktails and high heels. Until this moment the party had been nothing more than a vague mirage hovering above a horizon cluttered with than a vague mirage hovering above a horizon cluttered with the focus.

The all-important cake next demanded our attention. We scoured Melbourne for cakedecorating specialists. Whatever happened to my grandmother's favourite supplier in the basement of Royal Arcade? I'll swear the shop was still there last time I looked. Designing a centrepiece to match our new mood of rococo elegance could have been problematic, but fortunately we knew an excellent cake-maker, a man whose Swiss chocolate cake was to die for and whose decorating skills were nothing short of spectacular. The cake drama became a mere matter of making several visits to his hideout, clutching sketches of the proposed masterpiece, then waiting with bated breath for the final dénouement.

I was starting to feel a bit panicky. Just about everybody was RSVP-ing in the affirmative, our little house was going to be totally overwhelmed, and the only thing I knew about cocktails was that (a) they're expensive, (b) they're brightly coloured, and (c) drinking too many makes you sick.

Again we were rescued, this time by a friend who provided recipes, jugs, shakers, shot glasses, stirrers and who knew the quantities of everything. The shopping list rendered the man of the house just about speechless, but fortunately we don't do this sort of thing very often.

I felt bad about outsourcing the catering, too, but it turned out to be the best money I've ever spent. Wonderful food, wonderful ladies running the kitchen Rliss! kitchen. Bliss!

A spell of inclement weather encouraged us to erect a heated marquee on the deck, and to light a roaring fire outdoors. Friends and relatives helped with party lights, balloons, bar

Before we knew it, the party was in full swing, with clusters of relatives bobbing like lifebuoys in a sea of beautiful young things. The night went by like a Cat Empire-infested dream, then just as suddenly as it had begun, the rowdy bustle evaporated into silence as a pale dawn crept across the

By early afternoon, the carpet of leftover sleeping bodies had stirred, eaten and departed. We were left gazing numbly at cake crumbs, balloons, oddly aligned furniture and a mind-boggling assortment of empties. And silence—complete silence, except for the birds. It was all quite wonderful. quite wonderful.

I was especially grateful to be spared the so-called "standard" party peripherals: foreign objects in the pool, bongs in the shrubbery, people throwing up all over the place and trips to the emergency ward. It really was a wonderful night.

Funny how the inspiration all began in that quaint little Brunswick paper shop—I'll never underestimate the importance of invitations again.

Washing your hair

DREAMED I was washing my I felt the endless hot water streaming over my head, rolling down my back, slink ing over my shoulders—the pure sensual bliss of it. The smell of the shampoo, my fingers digging, lathering, wallowing...

And then the rinse, and the conditioner—lavender and Aloe Vera with a hint of mandarin oil—leaving it on for five minutes while I lathered again the bit I had already done. I stood luxuriating, soaking it in, watching it pouring and flow-ing over my head, rolling down my back, slinking over my shoulders. I can't believe I used to do this every day. The sheer luxurious excess of it. Well, we got used to the idea that your hair could be stunning (read glossy Pantene swish) every day. And why not? Our water every day. And why not? Our water supply was limitless, wasn't it? You washed your body every day—why not your hair? And then because it got a bit dry with all this attention, you had to put the oil back with conditioners and once a week with "treatments". Made it even more beautiful even more beautiful.

I'm old enough to remember when this wasn't the norm. When you washed your hair once a week (on Saturday night if you were going out" or Sunday if you just wanted it to look good for the be-ginning of the week) and it looked terrific (glossy Lustre-crème swish) for a couple of days; pretty good for another couple; ordinary for one or two.

But that's how it went. You just tried to adjust your hair-washing day around your social life. So I didn't go out very often.

And even earlier, with a childhood in the bush, when water came sporadically from our tank (or didn't) and not infinitely from (or didn't) and not infinitely from a tap. How often you washed your hair depended on whether it was summer and how much water was in the tank. (Washing hair was actually quite low on the list of priorities—coming after drenching sheep and watering the tomatoes. Besides, those long plaits meant you could go without washing it for ages.)

So how did our expectations those Pantene ads. But advertising did have a lot to do with it. Clean became huge. (Everywhere you look there are germs—even in your hair.) Beauty via "products" became even huger. Whole shops dedicated to hair products, where there were shampoos, conditioners and "treatments" to deal with every imaginable type of hair—lifeless, frizzy, flyaway of course, coloured and treated hair. I don't think they ever mentioned dirty hair: "Washlox shampoo, especially formulated for dirty hair".

But how did we get to need it washed so often? The theory was, why have dull or greasy hair for four days a week, when you can have that "just washed" feeling EVERY DAY. And it was pushed as a basic right: "Because I deserve it".

Dasic right: Because I deserve it.

I was in India during the rampant hair washing stage of my life, staying with friends who were describing an impending religious ceremony when they would wear special clothes and WASH THEIR HAIR for the occasion, and I thought, "wow, as if it's a special treat?"

It was interesting. Normally they

"oiled" their hair, rubbing coconut oil through it, putting the oil back in, where we were washing it out. lasked a group of giggling young girls about it. They said that brushing the oil in removed the dirt better than water did. I supposed it was a bit like the 100 brush strokes we were supposed to do before bed, in the old days.

My scalp was still tingling with the pleasure of my dream wish when the alarm woke me at six o'clock. We had our water turned on for only three hours, so I had to leap into action. After filling our drinking and cooking containers and putting on a load of washing, I had the big decision: how to use the rest of my day's allocation.

The drooping lemon tree—one of the last remnants of my little garden—would love a drink, and the floor around the stove was get-ting very sticking underfoot. No, I thought. I know what I'll do. I'm going to wash my hair. It's been low on the priority list for so long that I've been forced to wear hats all week.

My imagination was so fired up, I could pretend that our sultry little trickle was a steaming gush, and I could stand there (for a few minutes at least) and dream about the good old days when our water supply was limitless. Well it was, absorb its potential from within my smug feathers, make lists in my head of things I should do.

But my usual bush walk in the face of slamming wind more penance than pleasure. The dismal grey splutters "go home".

The alum sodden garden grows slimy brown toadstools hand-numbing weeds freeze out all joy.

Now the blue's gone bed's looking good. The wild thrash of trees needs watching; the rain's roof concerto an insistent lullaby.

And if that palls at all there's a pile of books a fire to curl up by and a huge black bear to steal my dreams.

A policeman's lot: from here to Warburton!

With the official opening of our new police station last month. SANDY BURGOYNE has tracked the story of policing in Warrandyte over the years.

was established at Anderson's Creek in August 1856, but without a house or lockup. Police records of that time show that a constable's house would be "conveyed to its destination and will be erected in a few days". By October the house stood on a section of several acres. At about this time recently surveyed town allotments went on sale.

Three years later Senior Consta-ble J. Feathers Dunlap is recorded as being in charge at Anderson's Creek, with the following invento-ry: one room of zinc for quarters; a six-stall zinc stable; and a lock-up of wood with a zinc roof. A tour of duty was demanding in those days, as the mounted constable was required to visit the new mining claims at Warburton and included the New Chum (Healesville) field. The round trip took three days. Much of the track was rough with several treacherous creek cross Contemporary records show that police officers at Anderson's Creek were kept busy. For instance in 1860, Mounted Constable John McAdam reported a resident selling "spirituous liquors" without a licence, and Mounted Constable Purcell reported the arrest and trial of Francisco Palliscena, alias William Hatfield a ticket-of-leave holder, for robbery.

In 1863 an extra mounted consta-ble was approved for Anderson's Creek until the building of a police station at Warburton later that year. Official quarters were not available for the new arrival and he was paid an allowance of two shillings per night for accommoda-

In the following year Inspecting Superintendent P.K. Smith visited Anderson's Creek and reported: "The importance which at one time distinguishes this gold field, seems to have departed." The furore of the initial gold rush had passed and the police station closed in 1865.

A police presence had been reestablished by 1891, as in that year Mounted Constable McCormick (or McCormack) of Warrandyte rescued the mail carrier and the rescued the mail carrier and the coach driver from the flooded Woori Yallock Creek.

The well-being of the local officers' horses was essential to the coverage of their large district. In 1893 Warrandyte's Mounted Constable Wade reported to Superintendent Montfort that the poor Constable Wade reported to Super intendent Montfort that the poor shoeing by the police contractor had caused his troop horse to become lame. Mr W. Gribble of Box Hill shod horses for police stations from Burwood to Warrandyte. Mounted Constable Wade's complaint was not the only one complaint was not the only one received about this farrier and Mr Gribble "resigned his contracts" soon after.
In 1900 the local officers were becoming frustrated with the poor condition of the police station, which was described as being situ-ated on "the Hill" adjacent to the recreation ground. Mr Stiggants inr was the property's landlord and a lively correspondence ensued be-tween himself and Superintendent

R.A. Smyth (or Smythe).
The superintendent wanted over due maintenance and repairs car-ried out on the building, whereas the landlord made his own demands known. During this standoff Mrs McGill wrote to Superintendent Crampton offering a property on Yarra Street (near the present telephone exchange) for lease. She said in her letter, "I am prepared to let my premises centrally situated and adjoining Court House consisting of six rooms, kitchen, stable, outbuildings and paddock at thirty nine pounds per annum." Her offer was investigated and although it was investigated and atthough it cost $3 a year more than the Stiggants property it was recommended as "the premises are well worth it. The present station is in an out of way place and in bad repair. The officers moved to the new premises in the middle of 1901.

Apparently some Warrandyte officers had trouble keeping their records up-to-date. "Constable Parsons has not replied to my question of 14th herein," Superintendent Crampton fulminated in May 1901 in an internal memo. "The Constable must endeavour to treat Correspondence more Systematically and Carefully."

The Police Gazette for September 1917 noted that the Warrandyte station "has been broken up". One year later the same publication announced that "a police station opened on the 2nd of this month"

In January 1932 The Advertiser

(late Evelyn Observer) reported that fire destroyed the house being used as the Warrandyte police station. All police papers and documents were lost.

Early in 1935 Constable Bert Birthisel became officer in charge at Warrandyte. Three years later he was also elected captain of the local Bush Fire Brigade at its inaugural meeting.

According to local historian Bruce Bence, the police station was still at 71 Yarra Street in the mid 1940s. At some stage, probably during the 1950s, the office re-located around the corner to Forbes Street (now Police Street) to the weatherboard building that stood there until late last year. In July 1973 Cr Marsden from the local council (then Doncaster-Templestowe) claimed in the Diary that Warrandyte police station was manned for only one third of its operating hours. He blamed this on two officers serving an area of 21 square miles.

A local officer, Constable Andy Baker, in 1979 helped organise a regular Blue Light disco at the Athenaeum Hall in Doncaster, including a free bus service for Warrandyte teenagers.
The Diary reported, complete with Jock cartoon, the police investigation of a strange occurrence on Yarra Street at the end of 1984. Enterprising thieves had broken into the then State Savings Bank building and tried to haul the safe through the front door with a por-

Two local senior constables continued a close association with the community, as the Diary reported in 1985. Wayne Pattison was playing football with Warrandyte and

Andy Baker, formerly of the mounted branch, offered advice on horse care. Baker was also president of the Warrandyte youth coffee shop at that time. In late 1989 the Diary warned of a proposal that the jurisdiction of Warrandyte police cease at the river. After much debate within a community that was tired of outsiders seeing the Yarra as a barrier instead of a place of meeting, responsibility for North Warrandyte was passed to the Eltham police station in mid-1991. This arrangement continues.

In September 1992 Sergeant Keith Walker took over as officer in charge and continues today. This makes him the second longest serving officer at Warrandyte since Senior Constable Cyril Moss—1963

The Diary reported at the end of 1995 that the state government wanted to sell what was locally know as the "police house" on the corner of Yarra and Forbes streets. Over the years many officers sta-tioned at Warrandyte had made it their home, but it was transferred to the ownership of another government department and the Walkers had to look for housing elsewhere.
In 1997 Sergeant Keith Walker

had the inspired vision of turning the "police paddock" between the police station and the river flat, where the troop horses were once kept, into a community garden. After much lobbying, plus many donations of money and time from local people, the Warrandyte Com-munity Garden opened in April 1999. For a modest annual fee local gardeners can tend their crops beside the new police facility.

AVID WYMAN, well-known AVID W TMLAN, WEI-KNOWN in Warrandyte for his contributions to this newspaper, died late in June. He was almost 75.

July 23, 1932, David was the younger child of Florence and Charles Wyman who owned a vineyard. He attended Barmera Primary School and Glossop High School, and went on to Urbrae Agricultural College.

He began his career in newspapers as an agricultural reporter on the Stock Journal in Adelaide. As a 21 year-old he took leave of absence and travelled by ship to Europe with a party of Rover Scouts, of which he was an enthusiastic member.

After attending the World Rover Scout Moot in Switzerland he travelled to London, finding work on a local paper in Ipswich and dispatching material as a freelance to a Melbourne paper and the Stock Journal in Adelaide. During this time he travelled with his best mate Peter through Europe for three months as a pillion passenger on a motorbike.

David returned to Adelaide in 1955, resuming his job on the Stock Journal. During that time he met Dorothy and they married, establishing a wonderful and loving 50 years partnership. A few years later they moved to Gippsland in Victoria, where David launched a farming paper for the David Syme organisation, publishers of The Age. He was later promoted to the position of managing editor of Syme's Latrobe Valley newspapers. In 1962 he took a job as public relations manager with Rocla Pipes (later Monier). Dorothy and David settled in Ringwood, then moved to Warrandyte in 1987. David and Dorothy established a small PR consultancy and he was able to work from home, editing Monier's house journal and preparing their catalogues and advertisements. He also did PR work for other clients. With Dorothy, he spent many hours exploring Warrandyte's bush and waterways.

His son Richard told the gathering at David's funeral: "He was a conservationist, long before global warming became a focus. He was a nature lover. Every family holiday or outing involved stopping to collect seedlings, which he later would propagate, one of his great passions."

As well as bushwalking, David enjoyed a number of other pursuits. "Dad also loved sailling," Richard said. "He joined the UPYA, the United Private Yacht Owners Association, or as fondly referred to by Dad and his mates, the Union for the Prevention of Young Alcoholics."

That same year David and Dorothy came to Warrandyte, the Diary advertised for a voluntary news editor. David responded, offering his services, tised for a voluntary news editor. David responded, offering his services, not as an editor, but as a reporter. He was immediately put to work. He covered many of our "big", front-page stories, month by month, for almost 20 years. He reported a wide variety of community issues, but it was his environmental and planning stories that are most noteworthy.

His love of this place and its environment, the biology he gleaned in college and his wide experience as an agricultural journalist and editor gave him the confidence needed to tackle these often difficult topics.

David was a persistent, fair and accurate reporter, with a clear and elegant writing style. His knowledge and his wide network of sources gave his work a credibility that lifted news reporting on the Diary to a new level. He was especially committed to the defence of the Green Wedge and his reporting informed that long and often bitter community struggle with passion and authority.

David retired when he reached 70, and though suffering indifferent health in following years, he continued writing for the Diary. His tragic, sudden death from a heart attack or June 29 was quite unexpected. He is sadly missed.

Nelson found plenty of positives from the Warrnambool loss, particularly the form of point guard Kate Cohen.

"Kate is in great touch, she really is leading from the front and producing her best form of the season. The younger players in the squad look up to her and that's great for our program.

"I was also impressed with Liz Benbow's performance. She works hard and will always fight for the win, as do all the girls. It's a positive attribute that every player in the club should adopt."

Warrandyte Netball Club's Under 17/1 Eagles defeated arch rivals DYC Lions to win the Doncaster and District Netball Association's Winter Season 2007 premiership.

After having lost the first semi-final to DYC, Warrandyte Eagles fought courageously to win the Grand Final by the narrowest of margins, with the final score being 30-29. Thoughout the winter season, Warrandyte Eagles and DYC each won one of the two games at which the rivals met. DYC had finished above Warrandyte on the ladder on percentage only. It was not until the Grand Final that Warrandyte secured the hardfought supremacy over the competition.

The Eagles team comprises Brittany Duncan, Jess Lindner, Georgia Nichol, Jenny Parkes, Simone Reid, Emma Rhode, Emma Stanley, Amy Taip, Georgia Walker and Cass Wilson.

Excited and proud coach Peta Walker said: 'They did so well, so well! Every player was 100% committed, every one gave everything they had to the game. We played on a very talented opposition, but we played as a team and not individuals and won the game. I could not have asked any more of any of them.'

After an indifferent start to the season, Bruce Davis has his under 16 East 2 girls playing inspired basketball at the right time of the season. Following a great four-point win over Sher-brooke 2 last Friday, it lifted the Venom's record over the past Venom's record over the past five games to four wins, and also guaranteed them a finals place. In a log-jam at the top of the ladder, the Venom play two finals aspirants in the last two rounds and will seal a top three place if they win at least one of these games. Their outstanding recent form is a good sign of more things to come from this talented up and coming group of girls.

Playing at home for the first time in six rounds, Damian Arsenis' under 12 Metro 1 boys booted sixth-ranked Wallan out of the finals equation and in the process ensured they will end the season in first place after recording a 37-30 victory. their regular season form into finals success.

Also guaranteed to play finals are the under 18 Metro 1 girls of David Reinecke who maintained their perfect season record with a tough 39-33 home win against Frankston 2. They will finish in top spot and are dubbed clear title favourites. And despite a 23-37 loss against ladder leader Knox, the under 20 Metro 1 girls of Jodi Kennedy are assured of second place.

Double chances in the finals race are also assured for Jim Kafkalakis' under 12 Metro 1 girls and the under 12 East Central girls of Emma Collins. On the back of a now five-game winning streak, Steve Killey's under 14 East 3 boys are also assured of finals action, but can finish as high as 1st with two wins, or a top three place with just the one. The under 12 East 1 boys are assured of fourth place despite a 10-point loss to ladder leader Melbourne 2 on Friday and are playing great team basketball at the moment.

However with so many venom teams now assured of playing in finals, there are still many fighting to make the cut with just two rounds to go. Whilst looking assured of finals action two weeks ago, Greg Pearson's under 12 Metro have now lost two in a row to be on now lost two in a row to be on Pearson's under 12 Metro have now lost two in a row to be on the brink of missing the finals altogether. They must win one of their last two games to make sure they get there, however they play first-placed Eltham 2 this week, following by fourth-ranked Craigieburn in what is a difficult journey to navigate.

After an amazing six-game mid-season winning streak, the under 16 East 1 boys of Stephen Murphy have now lost three of their last five to be on the edge of finals action in a jam with five other teams. Two wins from the last two games should be enough to ensure a place in the post-season. Lose just one game, and they will have to rely on the results of others to get over the line. After enjoying a place in the top five all season, the under 14 Metro 1 girls coached by Julie Davis now find themselves in seventh place and with plenty of work to do to get themselves back up to speed. Two wins from the last two games is a must to ensure finals action, and it will not be easy, and the parents should be prepared for another close game, with a draw, a one-point win and two two-point losses experienced over their last 4 games.

The under 14 East 1 girls of Penny Kafkalakis kept their finals hopes alive with another heart-stopping one-point win over fifth-placed Camberwell 2, making it six wins in a row! Whilst they should account for Warrandyte 3 this week and extend their streak to seven, they play first-placed Collingwood in the last round in a game that will determine whether they play finals or not. Nothing is beyond this team and if they believe in themselves, they can make the final cut.

Redbacks hopes unfazed by loss

With only two rounds to go things are hotting up for the Saturday Junior Basketball competition.

Warrandyte Redback A boys, coached by Ryan Holloway, came up against the top Eltham side. The Redback boys never recovered from a slow first half to go down by 46-14 at the final whistle.

"The second half was much improved, and we held the Eltham side for most of the half, until an injury (cork) to Jack Power" said Ryan after the game. "We are expecting to be contesting the AR final series and would expect to give a good account."

Colts easy win keeps finals hopes going

By DALE VITIRITTI

The U18's have played good, competitive football throughout the year and have developed well as a team. Currently fifth on the ladder, with a little bit of luck they still might play in the finals. From a coach's perspective, the most pleasing aspect of the season has been watching the continuous development of the players.

Reserves have plenty of promise

By CHRIS CHAPMAN

Despite sitting ninth on the EFL ladder, with just three wins to date, the young Warrandyte reserves side has shown steady improvement in recent weeks and continues to develop its core of young players.

improvement in recent weeks and continues to develop its core of young players.

July's highlight came in Round 14 with a resounding victory playing away against arch enemy Templestowe, coming from seven points behind at half time to record a morale-boosting 43-point victory. Up-and-coming full forward James Bowen kicked five goals in that match in his best game for the club so far, with 300-game veteran Dale Vitiritti chipping in with three goals and 19-year-old midfielder Brendan Zach also starring.

Other recent matches have seen the Bloods show plenty of spirit against more experienced teams, despite losing key players as they are promoted to the undermanned senior side, and full-forward Campbell Holland has missed the last three matches after breaking his hand against Nunawading.

Onballers Brian Elliott and Cal Haskings have gained valuable experience playing in the senior

Onballers Brian Elliott and Cal Haskings have gained valuable experience playing in the senior side, along with regular reserves performer Brendan Zach.
While pleased with the endeavour shown by his young side, coach Ash Grybas rued missed opportunities. "In the last month of football we have really shown that we can match it with the top sides in the division," said Grybas. "Unfortunately once or twice each game we have tended to drop right off and allow teams to really get a run on against us, which has ended up costing us games."

The Bloods have also been wasteful in front of goal since losing spearhead Holland, kicking 5.12 and 4.10 in their two previous contests.

However, signs are overwhelmingly positive for the future of this developing side, with the youth policy of the club beginning to show dividends. In Warrandyte's last match, against Coldstream, talented Under 18s Jason "Ox" Khouri and Evan Jones were given a taste of senior football. Both Khouri and Jones impressed Khouri and Jones impressed Warrandyte supporters, Khouri kicking two goals from full for-ward and Jones embarrassing a much older opponent from half back. Both will be players to keep an eye on in years to come

Second-year players such as Paul Burgoyne and Jimmy Bowen also continue to improve.
Co-captains Jarrod Boyce and Nick Drake have been solid performers in recent weeks, as have dynamic wingman Bernie Opteynde and the ever-reliable Craig Lincoln.
Big men Flynn Jarvis and the elusive Dillon Hudson-Norris have proved invaluable in ruck contests and Warrandyte Football Club's own resident DJ Cal Haskings has been a consistent performer, both on and off the field.

Fairytale turns to nightmare

Injuries to blame for Bloods' pain

By RICKY BOURKE

Warrandyte's horror run with injuries continued throughout July. It has contributed to a six-game losing streak and left the team currently bottom of the ladder.

This week's game saw the Warrandyte faithful make the long and undesirable trip out to the aptly named Coldstream.

The feeling within the team before the game did not enitomise.

aptly named Coldstream.

The feeling within the team before the game did not epitomise the level of focus and desire that has been shown in other more recent encounters. Noticing the flat pre-game mood, team leader Ben Reid attempted to lift the moral of the players by addressing the team and asking for a special effort. On the big ground, it was going to be so important that the Bloods win their share of clearances.

Unfortunately, Coldstream dominated the first quarter and Warrandyte appeared to be outclassed.

It was a lack of accountability in the midfield which allowed Coldstream's Doughty to take ball from the centre at full pace on four occasions. The deficit at quarter time was a massive seven goals.

The second term was much closer, but the boys still seemed to be unwilling to run hard when the ball was turned over.

After being crushed in the first half, Warrandyte discovered some run out of the backline, especially from Nathan Rose, Ben Taylor and Ricky Bourke, who linked through the middle field, especially Dion Mullet-Trelloar.

Although the game seemed out of reach at the final change, with Warrandyte down by eight

This was teamed together with a level of endeavour and Given the diminution of the Round 15 Upper Ferntree Gully

Upper Ferntree Gully

The Bloods were in a winning position against second-top team Upper Ferntree Gully, but early in the game lost key mid-fielder and captain Tom Naughtin with a rolled ankle and star recruit Adam Tsapasaris, an attacking half-forward, with a broken collarbone.

Upper Gully kicked the first five goals of the match. They obviously thought that they had the Bloods on toast and decided to undertake a more arrogant style of football. Suddenly there was a shift in the flow of play and Warrandyte kicked the next four goals of the term.

Warrandyte's movement of the ball improved dramatically as their confidence grew and the Bloods looked invincible. The momentum from the second half of the first guarter as their commence grew and the Bloods looked invincible. The momentum from the second half of the first quarter continued into the second. Warrandyte played dominating football, arguably some of their best for the year. The first five goals were Warrandyte's, meaning they had managed the last nine goals of the match. However, the momentum was set to shift again.

The Bloods had a shot at goal to go five goals up and increase their run of goals to 10; but the shot missed. Consequently, Uper Gully took the ball from the kick-in to the other end of the ground and kicked a goal, then the next one after a turnover in the Yarrasider's forward 50.

Both teams managed a goal time where Ben Taylor did a brilliant job on man-mountain Noonan for most of the day. Warrandyte fought well, but against the second-placed side and with two key players injured in the first quarter, it was always going to be a difficult proposition to take the game.

The first quarter was played with the intensity that the game deserved.

With the ball spending a lot of time around Templestowe's half-forward line, the back six of Warrandyte held strong under the pressure.

Round 13 Nunawading

The first quarter was a close one, with Nunawading managing many forward entries, but failing to break Warrandyte's backline.

The Bloods' back half was stretched against a year tall.

The Bloods' back half was stretched against a very tall Nunawading side. Andrew Brown moved into the backline for the match to cover one of the tall, dangerous forwards. The stage was set in the first quarter for a tough battle and Nunawading knew that it was not going to be the unproblematic game they expected. Warrandyte kicked two goals in the first quarter, both due to Matt Wood's silky skills. The second quarter was much like the first. The main difference was that Warrandyte managed more high-quality running football, but without seeing tangible results in the form of goals. This was frustrating to watch as the Bloods were again outscored by Nunawading by a goal. The margin at halftime was two goals. The Warrandyte rooms were quiet at halftime, as they were before the match, but this was no cause for worry. Tom Naughtin addressed the boys after the halftime break, saying that he could see they were foafter the halftime break, saying that he could see they were focused and truly wanted to win. It has been a hallmark of recent Warrandyte sides to lose matches within critical, but short, periods of play. It was to be the Bloods' downfall again; a 10-minute patch of football where Nunawading managed five goals. This was despite Warrandyte's domination of play in the first half of the quarter. The deficit had blown out at three-quarter time to a difficult, three-quarter time to a difficult, three-quarter time to a difficult, though not impossible, six goals. The boys again dominated play in the final quarter after Nunawading snuck the first goal home, which was to be the only home, which was to be the only goal that they kicked for the final term.

The attack on the ball from the young Bloods typified the endeavour shown all day, resulting in a late surge of five goals. Given there were a few missed opportunities, the game could very easily have gone the other way.

Round 12 Boronia

Naughthi, returning after a successful warm-up last week in the twos.

Most importantly, it was Josh 'Killer' Eyre's last game in the red and white. There has been plenty of talk about wanting to play well for Josh and sending him off to the military academy with a win. 'Killer' has played for Warrandyte since the under 10s, missing only one season in that period, this being his fourth season of senior football.

Coach Peter Green just wanted a sustained attack on the ball from his players, expecting good results to follow. It was in the latter part of the first quarter that the Bloods be gan to get on top of Boronia and they went into quarter time with their heads up, trailing 4.2 to 3.1. The second quarter was a hard-fought contest, with a large amount of the play occurring around the centre of the large around the centre of the large ground.

It was Boronia that managed to move the ball forward with greater efficiency, managing three goals.

Warrandyte's midfielders, especially Wood, Holman and both Naughtins, were winning the ball at contests but the halforward line proved a difficult the ball at contests but the hair-forward line proved a difficult barrier to pierce. This was due to the wet conditions making the ball slippery and heavy, ren-dering the Bloods' high-marking forwards much less effective than in recent weeks than in recent weeks.

The half time score was Boronia 7.3 to Warrandyte 3.1. Scoring became more difficult in the second half with further rain and heavier legs.

Warrandyte kicked the first, coal of the quarter reducing the goal of the quarter, reducing the margin to three goals. However, they also kicked four points, which could have made the score line far closer at the final change.

Boronia's only goal of the quarter came opportunistically from a fumbled ball in the slippery quagmire that was the middle of the ground. The match was still within Warrandyte's grasp with one quarter to play, the score 8.3 to 4.5. There was plenty of ball movement in the final quarter, just limited scoring. Matt Wood put together one of the most prolific quarters imaginable, racking up at least 20 touches. He was well-supported by Todd Holman and Andrew Brown who also had a lot of football in the final term. Their high statistics were a direct result of an instruction Boronia's only goal of the a direct result of an instruction from Peter Green for players to back themselves and trust their abilities.

The final deficit was three straight goals, after Todd Holman kicked the last goal of the match near full time. It was a day for midfielders, with plenty of stoppages. Accordingly, the best players were the ones who played in and around these stoppages: Todd Holman, Matt Wood, Tom Naughtin, Luke Naughtin and Private Josh Eyre.
